Grants boost for region

Maranoa MP David Littleproud has announced that the Winton Neighbourhood Centre and Diamantina Rodeo and Campdraft Association will share almost $23,000 in Federal Government funding under Round 7 of the Stronger Communities Program.

The Winton Neighbourhood Centre has secured $20,000 to purchase a custom barbecue trailer in time for its rodeo this weekend, the first in over 10 years.

“This custom-built barbecue trailer will be a social connector - used in the community during disaster responses, as well as for community not-for-profit groups to use in their fundraising efforts,” Mr Littleproud said.

Flight link for life

Neil Fisher wants to use his new position as the Face of Rockhampton’s 2022 Relay for Life to fight for the reintroduction of flights from the Beef Capital to the Central-West.

Cr Fisher, who is also Rockhampton Regional Council deputy-mayor and Rockhampton Airport chairman, said 50 people undertook the seven-hour road journey from Longreach to Rockhampton every week for medical reasons alone.

“It’s very hard for them, as there’s so few options. There’s very little rail service thanks to Covid, the bus service is just a few days a week and if you want to fly you have to go all the way to Brisbane and then Rockhampton,” he said.

“Going through my own cancer journey, I met a number of people from the Central West, places like Blackall, Jericho and Longreach, who needed to come in to Rocky every couple of weeks for chemo.

“You can be so sick after chemotherapy, can you imagine not being able to go straight home and rest but to drive six to eight hours to get back home?”

“Perhaps our greatest inefficiency in CQ is not having those direct air routes.”

The editor's desk

As the racing season is getting under way, I have started to find appreciation in a sport I may never have thought I would.

There is an undeniable beauty in a horse after a race - albeit still a little confronting for a city boy like me.

I have also noted the crowd is much less rowdy than I expected after reading Hunter Thompson's the Kentucky Derby is Decadent and Depraved.

That story may have given me the wrong idea.

Still there is much to look forward to in the season and the competition among jockeys is tightening up.

Just remember to gamble and drink responsibly.

Brekkie in gardens

By Michael R Williams

Over two days of talks with CQ University professor Mehraban Farahmand, locals were able to learn a little more about urban agriculture and Mr Farahmand's takes on the environment and community organising.

Locals gathered also at the community gardens for a breakfast.

Hoedown throwdown gets toes tapping

By Michael R Williams

Locals were given a chance to unleash their inner line dancer at Edgely hall thanks to Hoedowns for country towns, a travelling duo of Claire Harris and Kate Strong that brings dancing events to country towns in the name of charity.

Ms Harris said the night was a part of a 20,000km road trip around Australia.

"Our three aims are to put events back on the calendar for rural people, share the love of line dancing, and raise money for seven rural charities," she said.

"The Queensland one is Aussie Helpers, a charity that helps keep farmers on the land when times are tough.

Ms Strong said this was about bringing rural communities together.

"It's been a couple of tough years for everyone with Covid and droughts and floods and bushfires and all the rest of it," she said.

"We really just want to bring communities together - we're always keen to get on the dance floor."

It's high time to link West

By Matthew Pearce

Neil Fisher wants to use his new position as the Face of Rockhampton's 2022 Relay for Life to fight for the reintroduction of flights from the Beef Capital to the Central-West.

Cr Fisher, who is also Rockhampton Regional Council deputy-mayor and Rockhampton Airport chairman, said 50 people undertook the seven-hour road journey from Longreach to Rockhampton every week for medical reasons alone.

"It's very hard for them, as there's so few options. There's very little rail service thanks to Covid, the bus service is just a few days a week and if you want to fly you have to go all the way to Brisbane and then Rockhampton," he said.

"Going through my own cancer journey, I met a number of people from the Central West, places like Blackall, Jericho and Longreach, who needed to come in to Rocky every couple of weeks for chemo.

"You can be so sick after chemotherapy, can you imagine not being able to go straight home and rest but to drive six to eight hours to get back home?

"Perhaps our greatest inefficiency in CQ is not having those direct air routes."

Rockhampton Airport produced a business case for East-West flights as far back as 2018.

Cr Fisher said while the medical need alone was probably the best business case for the service, there were many other benefits as well.

"A lot of families out west have children who go to boarding schools in Rockhampton. Wouldn't it be great to have that service so that they could fly home for long weekends?" he said.

"It's probably costing our schools business, with Central-West families sending their kids to Toowoomba because you can fly there and back. And if they go to boarding school in Toowoomba, they'll go to university there as well, and we've lost those young people for Central Queensland."

Other beneficiaries of East-West flights would include businesses, the tourism sector, agriculture and beef industries as well as employees of government departments including teachers and police.

Longreach Regional Council mayor Tony Rayner said he would be in favour of an air-link between the Central-West and Rockhampton.

"The current regulated air routes provide an essential link to both Brisbane and Townsville, and we really value those connections.

Brisbane tourists Graham and Russell Acworth out the front of the Australian Stockman's Hall of Fame at Longreach.

But our communities also have strong health and education links to Rockhampton and we've long believed East-West flights would be viable," he said.

"The additional air service would improve those health outcomes in our region and bring economic benefits to both Rockhampton and the Central-West."

Cr Fisher said while he'd been fighting for East-West flights for about 10 years, Bonza Airlines' imminent arrival in Rockhampton, as well as the airline industry's revival after Covid-19, meant now was the right time for it to happen.

"I feel that after Covid a lot of people will fly more regionally now, which is why Bonza has a very good business case, as many people aren't keen to go through the 'mega-airports' like Brisbane, Sydney to Melbourne, but they do want to fly to different regional centres.

"You could fly from Longreach to Rockhampton to Cairns, or even Longreach to Rockhampton to Melbourne."

Cr Fisher said his ideal scenario would involve return flights from Rockhampton to Longreach every day, with multiple flights a week to places like Barcaldine, Blackall and Emerald.

"Rockhampton actually had those links back in the 1970s when we had Bush Pilot Airways," he said.

"There are airlines that are very keen and now is the time for the public to be outspoken and show that this is what they want."

Relief all around: Mandates no longer part of show

By Michael R Williams

A sigh of relief was cast among organisers in the central west, as show season is about to begin and the show vaccine mandate has been lifted.

Longreach Show Society Secretary Ingrid Miller said it was a major relief.

"We were quite confident that the restrictions would change, but we didn't think they would completely stop," she said.

"With restrictions last year, we ran the show and it went smoothly.

"And based on how things were going across the country, we were confident things would ease in time for the show."

Social distancing is still recommended, but QR codes are no longer necessary as well as having a "green card".

"It certainly takes the pressure off our committee," she said.

"It's already hard to get volunteers and getting the show ready, without the added pressure of people who can't come, but not just that - the show is just an event for the whole community.

"And it's not nice to have been in a position where we may have had to exclude people.

"It's a great outcome for the show."

Ms Miller highlighted the fact that it is a locally run event that makes a lot of contributions back to the community.

Fitting farewell to Sammi

By Michael R Williams

Old, young, man, woman, almost every type of local has seen the benefits of the expertise held by locally born, Sammi's Fresh Fitness business owner Sammi Sheehan.

She is a woman Longreach will be sore to miss.

A personal trainer, a group fitness instructor, a yoga teacher, a pilates instructor, and a professional masseuse, Ms Sheehan brings a range of skills to her work.

"I didn't have a set direction of what I wanted to be in high school, but I was very athletic," she said.

"I was rowing competitively - so, I just did a personal training course when I graduated.

"I knew uni wasn't for me - I had way too much ADHD to study for four years."

Ms Sheehan would go on to do courses in massage therapy as well as personal training at the Australian Institute of Fitness then another course in remedial massage elsewhere; along with other contacts, she would begin running boot camps in Brisbane.

She said she was drawn to fitness as it was a topic she found "easy".

"I am just genuinely passionate about fitness, and I really just enjoy and love it," she said.

"So, it's always been the vibe that I'm like, 'come along let's train together.

"Doing what I enjoy, and putting energy to that has seen people gravitate toward what I do."

At the end of 2014, some strange circumstances saw Ms Sheehan return to Longreach, the place she grew up in.

"It was G20 summit, and I heard Brisbane was going to blow up," she said.

"I called mum saying, 'can you book me flights to come home that weekend'.

"And, I never left.

"People who know me will be like, 'that's classic Sammi'."

Sammi's Fresh Fitness, a now iconic local business, started off with a few humble massages as Sammi looked to make some money before returning to Brisbane.

"I was just renting a little room in town, and I began to enjoy making money that the big boss didn't cut half of that out," she said.

"I committed in 2015 to working for a year than saving to travel," she said.

"I was massaging a few clients and squeezing in a few backyard "p.ts".

"Mum and Dad would see randoms walking around in the backyard in the morning, they'd be like, 'who's that', and I'd respond, 'no one, just a massage client'."

An early 5am crunch for Sammi's patrons.

With limited equipment other than a deep personal drive, Ms Sheehan began merging her training sessions into a group then she began running sessions at the showgrounds.

Then winter struck, and it began to be too cold to run the session at the showgrounds.

Ms Sheehan would invest in a studio at the Merino Arcade.

"I could fit seven in at a time," she said.

"Then in the meantime, I'd also have pilates - and in another room massaging.

"There were these p.t studios, and I was also doing bootcamps at the showgrounds - it was kind of all over the show."

Toward the end of 2017, the opportunity for the Roxy Theatre, the space she's in now, opened up - a major commitment.

"I was unsure whether I wanted to commit to that because it was a huge step," she said.

"I wasn't sure how tied I was to staying.

"I had only wanted to do a year, and it had been three years, and I was thinking about living abroad."

Ms Sheehan still had not gone on the big holiday she promised herself.

But the idea of being her own boss called to her.

"My ambition is to have people enjoy their workouts," she said.

"A playground for big kids.

"I try to keep my sessions, which is why I think it's been so successful, creative."

Being independent and creative have been the hallmarks of Ms Sheehan's stay in Longreach since returning after receiving her education in Brisbane.

But the call for adventure sings to her, each year she would save for a trip, but find herself tied down with work.

When Covid, and with no one being able to travel, Ms Sheehan fully realised this was a part of her makeup.

"I've loved the lifestyle, the community, my business, family - everything [about Longreach]," she said.

"I love Longreach.

"But, I feel like I've achieved quite a lot here and I feel I do need to branch out and challenge myself more.

"Longreach will always be home."

Tourism's eco aims

Restrictions to ease

Both peak tourism and conservation organisations met to discuss an "Alliance" statement that is calling for greater management, funding and increases in size of Queensland's environmental protected areas.

The Queensland Tourism Industry Council, Ecotourism Australia, Queensland First Nations Tourism Council, Queensland Conservation Council, Pew Charitable Trusts and the National Parks Association Queensland were among the interest groups to come to forge this alliance in the name of protecting nature and boosting ecotourism.

Daniel Gschwind, CEO of Queensland Tourism Industry Council said the Queensland Government has an opportunity to increase government investment to expand and better manage Queensland's protected area network by the 2032 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

"We welcome the Queensland Government's Protected Area Strategy and the ambition to protect 17 per cent, but we must also allocate the resources to effectively manage current and future protected areas," said Gschwind.

"Such an investment yields many returns for the community. Protecting and presenting new national parks will provide new opportunities for tourism, recreation, and regional development across the state.

"What better time to put more natural attractions on the map than in the lead up to one of the biggest events in the world, the 2032 Olympics."

Dave Copeman, Director of Queensland Conservation Council said he was excited to be working across sectors to ensure protecting and managing nature in Queensland was high on the budget priority list.

"Well managed protected areas safeguard species threatened by habitat destruction, feral animals, noxious weeds, and the impacts of climate change" said Copeman.

"Unfortunately, much of Queensland's nature is at risk. Only 8.2 per cent of the state is protected as a national park or private protected area. We should be aiming to double this by 2032."

"If the Palaszczuk government is going to reach the 17 per cent target, we need to see this reflected in the 2022 state budget with funding to grow our national parks and nature refuges.

Elissa Keenan, CEO of Ecotourism Australia, increasing government investment in Queensland's protected areas meant more opportunities for nature-based tourism experiences.

"Queensland is a hub for ecotourism. From the Great Barrier Reef to our Outback national parks - both international and domestic tourism relies on healthy rainforests, coastlines, and bushlands" said Ms Keenan.

"We know that natural beauty and wildlife are key factors when it comes to choosing a destination for our key international markets and domestic travelers. Increasingly we are seeing people seek out nature-based, sustainably managed tourism destinations."

The Alliance calls on the Queensland Government to fulfill the promise of the Protected Areas Strategy by committing substantial additional funding in the 2022 budget to support:

1. establishment of new national parks and private protected areas;
2. new opportunities for Indigenous-led conservation and cultural tourism;
3. effective management of the natural and cultural values within protected areas; and
4. exceptional visitor experiences, including nature-based and cultural tourism activities.

SMA welcomes Sheep Meat Funding

By Sheep Producers Australia

Sheep Producers Australia has welcomed the $20.1 million over three years to strengthen on-farm biosecurity by supporting the adoption of livestock traceability reforms.

"The Federal budget has delivered on biosecurity, traceability, climate, tax concessions, trade and supporting future industry events and will benefit not just our sheep industry, producers and members, but the whole red meat industry supply chain," SPA CEO Bonnie Skinner said.

"National traceability reform will ensure that livestock traceability can evolve and meet future biosecurity and market access requirements as well as unlock productivity gains throughout the supply chain, securing a strong future for sheep producers both domestically and within our global markets.

SPA welcomes measures encouraging farmers to participate in biodiversity and stewardship practices including concessional tax treatment for carbon abatement, and the expansion of the patent box scheme to include agricultural sector to support the delivery of practical, technology-focused innovations for producers.

The $84.5 million investment into drought readiness and resilience is essential to prepare and support producers for future climate events and food security.

The $12.0 million over three years from 2022-23 to support large agricultural trade events that promote agribusiness will enable the delivery of the LambEx trade show and improve the profile of lamb and sheep meat.

"Industry conferences and events such as LambEx are important to industry to demonstrate the quality of Australian lamb, the opportunity to present seminars offer property tours to demonstrate and showcase the latest research, solutions, and innovative products for industry," Ms Skinner said.

"Sheep meat production is a significant industry that supports nearly every region in Australia and has underpinned the prosperity of the country and employed generations of Australians. The significant investment into our industry will support the $100 billion 2030 agriculture target."

By Christopher Sullivan, Central West Hospital and Health Service chief executive

Allowing for cases discharged after completing isolation, the total number of active cases in the region as of Tuesday was 15, all of whom are being managed via the Virtual Ward. We are also aware of some cases across the region who have opted out of receiving healthcare as they are Covid-well or self-managing their symptoms.

To date, accounting for those who have been discharged from quarantine, the Central West HHS has recorded 453 cases of Covid-19 since the first case on 22 December.

Covid-19 restrictions will ease further at 1am Thursday, April 14, with the vaccine requirement to be removed from venues including:

- Pubs, clubs, cafes and restaurants
- Theme parks, casinos and cinemas
- Weddings
- Showgrounds
- Galleries, libraries, museums and stadiums.

The vaccine requirement will still apply to vulnerable settings including:

- Hospitals
- Aged and disability care
- Prisons
- Schools and early childhood centres.

Covid-19 cases are continuing to occur in the Central West and are surging across Queensland, so I urge residents not to be complacent. The pandemic is still with us.

With pandemic measures largely no longer in place across the state, the potential for influenza to spread this year is much higher.

Influenza vaccination is recommended for all people aged six months or older.

The fluvax is available from later this month (April) and is free for those groups at higher risk of severe disease, including:

- Children aged 6 months to 5 years
- Adults aged 65 years and older
- Pregnant women
- All Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- People with certain medical conditions, including diabetes and certain cardiac, respiratory, and neurological conditions.

However, while the vaccine itself is free for at-risk groups, a consultation fee may apply at your GP. People who are not eligible for a free flu vaccination are able to purchase one at private pharmacies or local GPs.

Given the continuing case numbers across the nation, the Australian Technical Advisory Group on Immunisation (ATAGI) also has recommended a fourth dose of Covid-19 vaccine - either Pfizer or Moderna - to increase protection for the winter for four at-risk groups.

- Adults aged 65 years and older
- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people aged 50 years and older.
- Residents in aged care or disability care
- People aged 16 years and older who are severely immunocompromised.

Art shows outback in the abstract

By Michael R Williams

The beautiful and profound art work of Jundah artist Donna Rivers will be on full display at the Grasslands Art Gallery in Tambo, an exhibition that is certain to soar.

This will be Ms Rivers first solo exhibition. Gallery promotions officer Alison Shaw said the gallery likes to have a variety in their program and to support regional artists like Ms Rivers.

“Donna’s work is just stunning - just the way she creates is amazing,” Ms Shaw said.

“I think this will make a very colourful and very entertaining exhibition.

“She just sort of creates - as she says herself, she just sort of starts.”

Ms Shaw described Ms Rivers’ approach to art as instinctual.

“She’s self taught, but I think this will be a big moment for her as an artist,” she said.

“It will be great to have more eyes on her work.

“I just think her work is so refreshing; I’m really exited about this exhibition, I think it’s going to be stunning.”

The exhibition will be at the Grasslands Art Gallery in Tambo until May with a free event on tonight at 6.30pm.

Busy times in region and across the state

Hello again, it’s good to back after another busy couple of weeks.

A big thank you to everyone who paid their rates by the due date on Monday.

Unpaid rates do begin to accrue penalty interest after the due date, so if you’ve missed the deadline, do get in touch with us straight away.

There was a great turnout to our Easter activities in Edkins Park last weekend.

Bluey and Bingo performed live and were very popular.

There were lots of stalls and vendors taking part in the Easter market as well, and it was great to see so many families coming out to enjoy the festivities.

Last week I was in Brisbane for some meetings and, while there, I was on hand to present the Premier with a $105,000 donation to the Qld Parliament Flood Appeal on behalf of the Western Queensland Alliance of Councils (WQAC).

RAPAD was proud to donate $5,000 for each of its seven councils.

Together the 22 councils of WQAC raised $105,000 to help the 22 councils of South East Queensland, in recognition of the support our communities have received from them over the years.

In addition, WQAC councils also sent plant and equipment to flood-impacted areas to assist with the recovery and clean-up.

This week my fellow Councillors and I were on the road, visiting each of our communities for our bi-annual community forums.

While we were in Yaraka we inspected the new unmanned diesel bowser installed by IOR petroleum.

The new bowser is a great outcome for the Yaraka community and one that they asked for our help with.

Certainly, Council has worked hard behind the scenes to get things ready for a private operator to come in and establish a service, but we’re pleased that IOR came on board, and we look forward to them providing a service to the Yaraka community and the many visitors and transport operators that travel there.

The community forums this week were a great opportunity for people to be heard, but they’re also an opportunity for the community to hear from us.

It’s easy to talk about Council, but what I’d really like is for people to talk to Council.

The more people we hear from, the better the results we can achieve.

As we always say, you don’t have to wait for the forums to come around to have your say.

We’re here to listen to our community all year-round.

So if you couldn’t make it to the forums – and we recognise they don’t suit everybody – send us an email or give us a call to have a chat!

We’re happy to answer questions about anything in our region that people want to know more about.

We also want to know how we can help, and what we can do better for our communities.

You can find direct contact details for each of our Councillors by visiting longreach.qld.gov.au/elected-members.

Before I go, I’d like to recognise the great job Scott Mason is doing as our Acting Chief Executive Officer.

He’ll be with us until we make a permanent appointment.

The position will be advertised by Peak Services and we anticipate it going out this week.

We’ll also be posting the application pack on our website once it’s ready.

If you see Scott out and about in the community, be sure to say hello.

I’ll be back with another column in two weeks.

Until then, you can find direct emails and phone numbers for me and each of my fellow Councillors at longreach.qld.gov.au/elected-members.

If you want to know anything at all, reach out to one of us – or contact Council directly on (07) 4658 4111 (24hrs), or via email to assist@longreach.qld.gov.au.

Behold, the wily Willy Wagtail

While I was hanging out the wash, the antics of a wily wagtail caught my eye.

It was ducking and diving in a feverish dash through the mostly prickles in our yard.

Then I noticed what had caught Willy’s eye.

A grasshopper.

The wily wagtail’s movements mirrored those of the grasshopper until it finally popped up with its ill-fated prey in its beak.

Breakfast was served.

Mission accomplished.

Except that while it was busy stalking the grasshopper, the lousy jacks started gathering in the branches of the surrounding trees, carefully watching Willy’s progress.

Then another wily entered the scene, perhaps hoping to snatch an easy snack from its mate.

If so, it was doomed to disappointment.

The first wily darted away, grasshopper firmly clamped in its beak, sending an avian message apparently not unique to seagulls: ‘Mine!’

The second wily took the hint and backed off, but not one of the lousy jacks.

It boldly swept onto the garden gate, looming over the first wily menacingly.

Our wonderful wily cheekily flew up and landed on the gate right beside the lousy jack, as if saying, ‘I dare you ...’

The lousy jack flew off.

Judging by the plumage and body size, this particular wily was a juvenile, so they clearly demonstrate impressive predatory prowess from an early age.

And brass.

The wily wagtail is known as the Jirndirri to some Indigenous peoples.

While they believe there is beauty in their presence, they also know the Jirndirri doesn’t always have good intentions.

According to their stories, with a wag of their flirty tail and an innocent chirp, they can lead a person down the garden path and into strife, if they’re not careful.

This is perhaps why the lousy jack was so wary.

Certainly, that hapless grasshopper learned that a wily isn’t well-intentioned to its kind.

While I’ve seen more beautiful birds, there is nothing quite like a wily in flight at sunset, its tail feathers, and wings becoming translucent in the low sunbeams.

Nature at its finest, I reckon.

I’ve always felt joy in the presence of wily wagtails, but they are a symbol of more than beauty and joy.

They are resilient.

They have remained with us, all through this drought, not simply surviving, but thriving, as they continue to bring new life into this world.

And tough.

As this wily did with the lousy jack, I’ve watched others stand their ground (or air, as the case may be) against sparrows, swifts, peewees, honeyeaters, magpies, crows, and even a hawk, though it took three or four together for that feat of daring.

They are truly remarkable specimens of the avian world.

Supporting local activities

Federal Maranoa MP David Littleproud has announced that the Winton Neighbourhood Centre and Diamantina Rodeo and Campdraft Association will share almost $23,000 in Federal Government funding under Round 7 of the Stronger Communities Program.

The Winton Neighbourhood Centre has secured $20,000 to purchase a custom barbecue trailer in time for its rodeo this weekend, the first in over 10 years.

“This custom-built barbecue trailer will be a social connector - used in the community during disaster responses, as well as for community not-for-profit groups to use in their fundraising efforts,” Mr Littleproud said.

“During times of disaster, people who have been displaced due to floods or fires need meals, as do the volunteers from the different aid agencies involved.”

The Diamantina Rodeo & Campdraft Association will use their $2,850 grant to purchase new uniforms for the volunteer committee, who work tirelessly during the various community events in the Winton district.

“Events like the local campdraft, rodeo, and gymkhanas provide an opportunity to bring the whole region together to compete, network or just catch up. New long-sleeved uniforms will ensure the committee are safe from sun damage as well as easy to recognise for those needing assistance during events that bring much-needed visitor dollars to the outback community,” Mr Littleproud said.

“I’m a firm believer in bringing people together and improving community services across Maranoa because it has a positive flow-on effect on our quality of life and how we support each other – these upgrades for the Winton region reflect this.”

Mr Littleproud also announced a grant of $18,002 in Federal Government funding to the Isisford Industry and Recreation Development Association for their Isisford Community Garden Regeneration Project.

The funding from Round 7 of the Stronger Federal Maranoa MP David Littleproud and Winton Shire Mayor Gavin Baskett in Winton.

ger Communities Program will help to erect a weather resistant shade structure over the community garden and install an irrigation system for their developing orchard of fruit trees.

Mr Littleproud said that the community garden would deliver positive and sustainable social benefits to the Isisford community through the provision of free seasonal fruit and vegetables to the community.

“Isisford sits almost 80km from the nearest grocery store, restricting the community’s access to fresh produce,” Mr Littleproud said.

“The development of a large shade area and irrigation system will enable the community to successfully grow plants all year around, whilst encouraging local participation and healthy lifestyles.”

“I’m a firm believer in bringing people together and improving community services across Maranoa because it has a positive flow-on effect on our quality of life and how we support each other – these upgrades for the Isisford community reflect this.

“Regional communities are the heart of this country and I want to make sure that small capital projects are funded and the community gets exactly what it needs.”

“Regional communities are the heart of this country and I want to make sure that small capital projects are funded and the community gets exactly what it needs.”

Round 7 of the Stronger Communities Programme delivered $150,000 in Federal Government funding to Maranoa community groups - fourteen projects across Maranoa were funded in this round.

Project grants range from $2500 to $20,000 to help bolster rural communities.

Littleproud shirtfronts Telstra on outback connectivity

A number of Central West interest groups and locals have had serious issue with Telstra and the care they’ve shown in producing good communications infrastructure in the west, and Federal Maranoa MP David Littleproud has called on the new, incoming Telstra CEO to front up and do more for regional customers whose lives and livelihoods are being put at risk from Telstra’s service failings.

“Mr Penn allowed telecommunications across regional Australia to reach crisis point,” Mr Littleproud said.

“He allowed vital landline and mobile infrastructure to degrade and permitting band-aid fixes to occur, despite the terrible impact this is having on regional Australians.

“I have case after case of Telstra service failings being reported to me by my Maranoa constituents and I implore Telstra’s new, incoming CEO to act otherwise there could be a loss of life.”

Mr Littleproud mentioned an elderly couple in his electorate’s town of Chinchilla whose landline fails every time it rains.

“With Telstra just doing a band-aid fix each time and the problem recurring,” he said.

“This has been going on for the past two years.

“I have written to Mr Penn about this several times and still Telstra is yet to properly fix this couple’s landline.

“This couple also have very poor mobile service in their area, so they are dependent on their landline should an emergency occur.

“Their lives are being put at risk and Mr

Penn knows this.”

“Telstra outages have also been occurring in Bedourie and Birdsville, with Telstra having to send for replacement parts from Melbourne. The outages were therefore lengthy, again putting residents’ lives at risk, affecting emergency and medical services and severely impacting businesses through loss of Eftpos.

“There are also some major mobile network over-capacity issues happening in the regions due to an influx of people moving away from city life as a result of COVID-19. This over-capacity problem is causing mobile services to deteriorate rapidly and drop outs are occurring frequently. My constituents have been informing me that there is now very poor mobile service where there used to be good service.

“These same over-capacity issues seem to also be occurring in Millmerran Downs, Captains Mountain, Mungindi, Goondiwindi, Longreach and Wycombe, just to name a few. In fact, it’s not uncommon for a mobile call to drop out three or four times in these areas. Telstra has admitted upgrades need to occur, but are suggesting this may not happen until the 2023 financial year.

“The situation is frankly at crisis point and I am calling on Telstra to front up and commit to immediate major landline and mobile infrastructure upgrades in Maranoa.

“I also expect Telstra to come to the table regarding the 2021 Regional Telecommunications Review’s 12 recommendations, which are currently before our Federal Government for adoption and implementation.”

Time of the governess

Winton District Historical Society and Museum

The following story is a follow up to the story in last week's edition titled, "Time of the governess".

This is a condensed extract from the reminiscences of Ethel Clare Carter (nee Hindmarsh), a young woman who went to western Queensland as a governess in 1911.

Whilst staying with her aunt in Townsville, Ethel was offered a position as governess for the Milson family at Springvale Station, Boulia.

Accepting it, she travelled with the family back to Springvale.

There were three children, Alice, thirteen, Thalia, eleven, and David, nine years of age.

One afternoon after school, Thalia sees the figure of a tall, tired man coming toward the house.

Mr Bell has walked thirty miles that day from the Diamantina.

He left the Railway Commissioner and his party marooned on the banks of the river, all feeling very hungry as they had eaten their last scone.

[They were members of a survey party seeking a route for a rail line to Boulia and beyond].

Mr Milson sent help and soon the station horses pulled the motor cars out of the river where they were bogged. T

The party stayed a week at Springvale and the girls did their best to entertain the visitors, and all were sorry to see them go.

Mr Milson, who makes a splendid host, showed them another route to Winton.

When Christmas arrived it was 125 degrees (52.7C) in the shade, but being a very dry heat, one does not feel it as much as one would imagine.

The black fellows and their wives, about a dozen in all, counting the three or four piccaninnies, had a good Christmas dinner of roast beef and plum pudding, watermelons and rockmelons and homemade beer.

Palpararra Dick, who was a tall, fat blackfellow, had over-eaten.

Feeling very uncomfortable on such a hot day, he went to the creek and rolled over and over in the water, developing cramps, so Mr Milson was called to doctor him with some medicine.

Later, Mr and Mrs Snelling from Cork Station, visited Springvale, bringing their two boys.

Mr Milson arranged a picnic at the springs, which are twenty miles away.

There are several springs, water oozing out of the earth, the largest one being ten feet (three metres) across, more or less.

The ladies and children got into it and sank to their waists, but have to keep their balance as it is easy to topple over.

The force of the water coming up from underground keeps them from sinking.

The Chinese cook was not only a good cook, but an expert fisherman, and it was the usual thing to see him after dinner with his hurricane lamp on his way to the creek to set his lines, and for breakfast, everyone would enjoy a well-cooked meal of fried fish.

Commissioner's car being pulled out by a horse.

The Aboriginals on Springvale Station hold Ethel spellbound with their quaint ways and chatter.

They were all assembled at the large wood heap to wave her farewell when she departed with Alice and Mr Milson.

Arthur Hindmarsh of "Narangie", near Winton, had reached the Mayne Hotel on his way to Springvale to take Ethel, his sister, back to Winton, but he was unable to cross the Diamantina.

Mr Milson and Alice said "Goodbye" to Ethel at Lucknow Station and she travelled by coach to Winton.

Inside the coach are two shearers, one having a broken leg, an old boundary rider on his way to the Winton Hospital with heart trouble, and a woman cook going to Llanrheidol Station.

That night at Middleton Hotel, Ethel hears the voices of men playing Two-Up, but she manages to sleep and be up in time to start off in the coach.

Fresh rains had fallen in the night making the soil very sticky, and the coach took until lunchtime to travel five miles.

Mr Bunning and Mr Fiskien join the coach at Llanrheidol Station, and by the time they reach the Diamantina crossing, darkness has set in. Ethel is advised to sleep the night in the coach, and when morning dawns, everyone is bustling to have breakfast.

The boundary rider steps lightly with his swag over his shoulder towards the coach and then moves away before a moaning sound is heard.

Mr Bunning and Mr Fiskien hurry and find the old man has breathed his last. It is sad leaving him behind, and everyone is awed at the presence of death.

A wayside hotel (The Forty-Mile, presumably) which was located somewhere between the channels of the Wokingham Creek was reached at lunchtime and Ethel waits in the dining room. All at once a huge cat jumps onto the table, seizes a roast leg of a goat, and gets down on the floor with it.

A girl coming in at that moment grabs the joint and puts it back on the table.

The Twenty-Mile Hotel is reached that evening, and Ethel waits there for her brother, who is on his way back from the Mayne Hotel.

She is glad to see her brother, Arthur, and they spend a week at a hotel in Winton to recover from the journey.

She then goes south to Brisbane and on to Goondiwindi to her sister Mabel, Mrs Kirk.

Agents on the money

The first season of Luxe Listings Sydney took the world by storm with its lavish homes and uber-wealthy clients. Siobhan Duck finds out what buyers' agent Simon Cohen and new cast member, property agent Monika Tu, have in store for the second instalment

There's no place like home. Especially when said home comes with a climate-controlled room dedicated to eating, storing and serving gourmet cheese; has real gold floors and walls or has been decorated entirely with custom-made Fendi furniture and homewares.

These are just some of the more extravagant and outlandish features of the multi-million-dollar properties being bought and sold every day by the elite team of real estate experts of Luxe Listings Sydney.

With its unique blend of eye-popping real estate porn and workplace drama, the Prime Video series has proved a huge hit with viewers and turned buyers' agent Simon Cohen into an overnight celebrity.

Of course, Cohen is no stranger to the glittering world of the rich and famous and he has been clinching deals for some of Sydney's most powerful people for years.

It has been an adjustment, however, for Cohen to suddenly find himself the one making people around him starstruck.

That being said, his newfound celebrity hasn't suddenly meant Cohen can go home to the same sort of digs as his uber-wealthy clients.

"You won't find any Fendi in my home – sorry Fendi!" he laughs.

"I've seen it all really, so going home to my own home is very realistic.

"I mean, I have to remind myself that my house, when compared to the rest of the world, I'm very lucky.

"But compared to the people I deal with, we're definitely not on the same level."

While he doesn't watch any reality television himself, preferring to unwind in front of a juicy scripted drama such as Ozark or Inventing Anna after a hard day of wheeling and dealing, Cohen says he can understand the appeal of Luxe Listings Sydney.

"First thing, and I think everyone says this, but the property porn is pretty epic," he says.

"I mean, Sydney is undoubtedly one of the most exquisite cities in the world, and it really showcases Sydney's beauty and what is amazing about living in Sydney.

"Visually, it's a phenomenal show. I think it's also funny. I think it's lovable and I think people get sucked into a world that is exciting. I mean, real estate is a very exciting world. Couple that with beautiful properties and a great city and ridiculous prices."

Hot property : Luxe Listings Sydney has turned buyers' agent Simon Cohen into something of a celebrity.

While his peers were dreaming of growing up to become doctors, astronauts or sports stars, Cohen has wanted to be in real estate for as long as he can remember.

And not just any old real estate – Cohen has always had his eye set on the top end of town.

"I grew up in the North Shore of Sydney, across the bridge, far away and I just had this passion for real estate," he says.

"At one stage when I couldn't drive, I was too young, I'd make my dad drive around Point Piper and Vaucluse to look at all the houses. It was my favourite thing to do.

"My grandmother in South Africa was a real estate agent. And so, whenever we used to go there, I used to do open homes with her. And so, it was my passion."

The first house Cohen sold went under the hammer for $9.8 million. But since then, he has also dealt with homes that have sold for more than $50 million.

With his reputation and track record in the high-end real estate market, it's little wonder that Prime Video sought him, together with his good friends and colleagues Gavin Rubinstein and D'Leanne Lewis out for Luxe Listings.

"I know it looks very easy in the show, but we've worked very hard to get to where we are – it's a cutthroat industry," he explains.

"And you don't want to do a TV show that paints you in the wrong picture or ruins it all.

"We all decided that Amazon [Prime Video] would make it classy and do it properly.

"We all decided that we'd do it together."

This season, the core trio of real estate gurus are joined by the glamorous and flamboyant property agent and buyer Monika Tu.

Unlike Cohen, Tu didn't grow up in her native China longing to buy and sell high-end homes. Tu began her career in IT, until, with her natural flair for sales, she made the switch to real estate with her second husband 13 years ago.

Tu says she now loves spending her days touring beautiful homes. She also enjoys the thrill of a sale, and last year she sold a luxury waterfront property with views of the Sydney Harbour Bridge for $45 million.

"We're providing a service, so we have to stay grounded," she explains.

"I [have] never been jealous [of a client's amazing home]. I love to hear about and to understand other people's achievements. So that's become my inspiration, or my motivation, to work harder and to be successful. Then hopefully one day I can afford a house like that too."

Tu's services are now so in demand with international buyers that she doesn't have time to personally oversee any transactions that are worth less than $13 million.

"I do have a team to service people who want property for $5 to $8 million but my cheapest is about $13 million," she says.

"I am still very humble though. I work seven days a week and it's never enough time."

After watching the first season of Luxe Listings Sydney, Tu knew what she was getting herself into when she joined the show. She said her motivation wasn't fame or to promote her business.

"I want to be an inspiration or maybe motivation to work harder," she says.

"I am a Chinese woman who couldn't speak proper English when I came here. I worked hard and see what I have done. I wish [to] be an inspiration to whoever wants to be in the real estate, or whatever, industry – anything's possible."

Seven, 8.30pm, M (2015)

Kate Winslet is in fine form here as Myrtle "Tilly" Dunnage, a complicated woman who returns to her rural home in Outback Australia after years honing her dressmaking craft in Europe. Turning up with her sewing machine and a lifetime's worth of baggage, Tilly has a subtle plan for revenge as she sets about bringing down her ugly hometown with her beautiful outfits. Her reappearance is not given the warmest of welcomes: her mother Molly (a brilliant Judy Davis) doesn't recognise her and local policeman Farrat (Hugo Weaving) stands by why she was banished all those years ago. With fine performances and finer costumes, The Dressmaker is a cut above. ★★★★★

Fabric of society:
Kate Winslet leads
The Dressmaker as Tilly, a seamstress whose return to her rural hometown sets tongues wagging.

INTOLERABLE CRUELTY
SBS World Movies, Friday, 7.30pm, PG (2003)

The Coen brothers go mainstream with this screwball farce in which a famed LA lawyer (George Clooney) finds himself both irked and enamoured by his many run-ins with a gold-digging divorcée (Catherine Zeta-Jones, pictured with Clooney). Although it's wrapped in a conventional rom-com package, the Coens' customary eccentricities are found in a gallery of bizarre supporting characters, and in the sparkling, witty dialogue. Billy Bob Thornton's cameo caps off this battle of the sexes. ★★★★★

BRIDGET JONES: THE EDGE OF REASON
Nine, Saturday, 8.30pm, M (2004)

When we last saw calamitous Bridget Jones (Renée Zellweger), it seemed she was on the verge of true love with the handsome Mark Darcy (Colin Firth, pictured with Zellweger). Well, four weeks into the relationship, all is not well – a cavalcade of embarrassments befall Bridget as she grapples with the reality of what a serious relationship entails. Minor imperfections aside, this jolly sequel features smashing comedic work from Zellweger and Hugh Grant as "the other man" Daniel Cleaver. ★★★

A BEAUTIFUL DAY IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD
7Flix, Saturday, 8.50pm, PG (2019)

If you like the line "we could all use a little kindness," then you'll love this feature. From director Marielle Heller, A Beautiful Day in the Neighborhood explores the make-believe world of American children's entertainer Fred Rogers (Tom Hanks, pictured). When journalist Lloyd Vogel (Matthew Rhys) approaches Rogers for an interview, the writer looks for cracks in the entertainer's cheerful demeanour, but instead finds a man who is just as kindhearted as he seems. ★★★★★

THE HELP
Seven, Sunday, 8.30pm, M (2011)

Kathryn Stockett's best-selling book is the platform for this moving work set in 1960s Mississippi. Directed by Tate Taylor, the light-hearted story is based on the lives of three women from very different backgrounds who break all societal rules to start a secret writing project. Emma Stone is society girl and unwitting revolutionary Skeeter, who joins with housekeepers Aibileen (Viola Davis) and Minny (Octavia Spencer, pictured, right, with Stone) in an unlikely sisterhood. ★★★★★

U-571
7mate, Monday, 8.30pm, M (2000)

The real-life capture of the Nazi "Enigma" encryption device from a German U-boat was a turning point in World War II – the handiwork of both US and British vessels. The revisionist version of events shown by writer-director Jonathan Mostow has the Americans doing it alone, with the Brits providing back-up. Factual misgivings aside, this is a decent action flick, with well-built suspense and fairly rounded characters played by Matthew McConaughey (pictured), Bill Paxton and Harvey Keitel. ★★★

THE BLING RING
10 Shake, Tuesday, 8.30pm, MA15+ (2013)

Sofia Coppola (The Beguiled, The Virgin Suicides) has a cult following with her moody, visually arresting films, but she is unlikely to garner new fans with this offering starring Emma Watson. Coppola zeroes in on vapid celebrity culture, bringing to the screen the real-life story of a bunch of LA teen thieves who targeted celebrities and stole almost $3 million in their quest for fame. Leslie Mann's (pictured, This Is 40) role as a "spiritual" mother is a standout, ★★

PICK OF THE WEEK

THE LIVING ROOM
10, Friday, 7.30pm

If the sneak peek of season 11 of The Living Room is anything to go by, the crew are swinging back to the '60s for a whole lot of fun. But for hosts Amanda Keller, Dr Chris Brown, Miguel Maestre and Barry Du Bois, variety is the spice of life: we don't expect them to spend long in their psychedelic '60s getup before another round of dress-ups takes their fancy. One thing fans can expect from this fun and enthusiastic lifestyle series is the return of The Help Desk and heartwarming stories of the team lending a hand to Australian families and communities in need, along with a series on travel for dummies and some pretty special dinner guests to keep everyone on their toes. Tonight, Miguel embarks on a 'Crazy Bull Five-Star Tour' of Melbourne with Chris, who has no idea what he's in for with the charismatic chef in charge. Meanwhile, Barry and Amanda help a local soccer club in need of a makeover. It's reliably fun Friday night fare.

The fab four:
Amanda Keller,
Barry Du Bois,
Dr Chris Brown and Miguel Maestre
return with season 11
of The Living Room.

JANET JACKSON
Nine, Sunday, 8pm

From her underprivileged childhood to becoming one of the highest-selling artists in music history, this four-part exposé manages to shine new light on Janet Jackson's (pictured) life. It was filmed over a five-year period, compiled using home footage, interviews with family and friends – including some of her brothers, mother and fellow musicians, Missy Elliott and Paula Abdul. In this double-episode special, Janet's early years, including her personal life and career missteps, are put under the magnifying glass.

BRITAIN BY BEACH
SBS, Monday, 7.35pm

The beautiful and rugged coastline of Britain has seen more than just ice creams and children's toes in its long history. While presenter Anita Rani (pictured) is, of course, partial to a sorbet on the sand, she is also keen to reveal the remarkable stories that have taken place on the country's beaches. She begins her windswept, salty air pilgrimage in Devon, where she recounts the wartime disaster Exercise Tiger, visits a gorgeous hotel adored by writer Agatha Christie and encounters a haunted village.

THE ROOKIE
Seven, Tuesday, 8.30pm

Now that we're more than halfway through season four of this comfort viewing-style police dramedy, it's questionable whether we can still call its main protagonist, middle-aged cop John Nolan (Nathan Fillion), a rookie, but this season really has dialled up the drama. In "Heart Beat", Nolan is confronted with big moments, both personally and professionally when a plane crashes in the city. Then, in "End Game" Officers Chen (Melissa O'Neil) and Bradford (Eric Winter) investigate the murder of a homeless teenager.

Greg Davies as

Paul "Wicky" Wickstead in
The Cleaner.

GOOD CLEAN FUN

THE CLEANER
Streaming, from Thursday, BritBox

Bloody, brilliant, but not quite as macabre as you might expect, this darkly hilarious comedy about a chatty crime scene cleaner, based on German series Der Tatortreiniger, boasts a stellar line-up of guest stars.

Greg Davies (The Inbetweeners, Taskmaster) doesn't divert far from his usual comic persona as forensic cleaner Paul "Wicky" Wickstead, a middle-aged man who takes great pride in his work – he insists there's not a stubborn stain he doesn't know how to remove – but tends to gossip more than he cleans.

Each episode functions mostly as a two-hander, with Wicky interrupted by his clients' bereaved family or neighbours while he cleans.

In the premiere, Helena Bonham Carter (right) is at her unhinged best as "The Widow", a woman, driven to her wits' end by her husband, who takes Wicky hostage. Subsequent instalments see David Mitchell, Ruth Madeley, Stephanie Cole, Layton Williams and Jo Hartley take on an range of eccentric characters.

Building the future

After being flooded with applications, the inaugural LEADAg agricultural training event has begun in Emerald - a program that hopes to connect young workers with employees in the Central and Central West regions of Queensland.

LEADAg has been developed by CHRRUP, a community-owned, central Queensland based profit-for-purpose organisation dedicated to thriving, connected rural communities.

CHRRUP CEO Simone Parker said she was excited to see LEADAg kicking off.

"We are already seeing such a buzz around this event, 66 students from across Queensland and New South Wales applied to participate," she said.

"It shows there's a huge demand out in the community, and in industry, for this type of training and we are happy to fill that gap.

"We have organised an interactive and informative week of activities for the students, and all the events will feature input from some really interesting industry mentors to ensure all the training is grounded in what industry members are really looking for in future workers."

The LEADAg program includes sessions on farm safely and first aid, fencing, pasture management and biosecurity, cropping production, supply chain and workplace success, and livestock handling and husbandry.

Students will also take a deep dive into the world of livestock handling, cattle genetics, and animal husbandry with CQ grazier and LEADAg mentor Mike McCosker.

"There is a huge demand in the livestock industries for enthusiastic young people, so these students have a really bright future ahead of them if they choose to pursue this career," she said.

"I'm hoping to give them some insight into the many different careers there are in the livestock and grazing industries, they could be anything from a station hand through to a reproductive scientist or vet.

"We'll be running the students through safe and effective livestock handling and drafting as well as the ins and outs of livestock genetics and the beef supply chain."

The LEADAg pilot course will run for one week and is funded by the Queensland Agricultural Workforce Network an initiative of the Queensland Department of Agriculture and Fisheries.

New sheep chief has world of experience

The Meat and Livestock Association has welcomed Dr Scott Williams as the new Chair of the Sheep Sustainability Framework's (SSF) Sustainability Steering Group (SSG).

They stated his history in veterinarian work and agricultural research will bring invaluable experience.

Dr Williams is well known in the farm sector as his consulting business has served the nation and the world, including work with research and development corporations, industry peak bodies, government agencies, and in education.

Dr Williams said he was honoured to have the opportunity to collaborate with fellow members of the SSG and value chain stakeholders to further develop and put into effect what is the world's first sustainability framework for the sheep and wool industries.

"I've had a strong interest in sustainability for a long time and I firmly believe the SSF is an initiative that is critical to the future resilience and prosperity of Australian sheep and wool businesses," Dr Williams said.

He said the evolution of sheep and wool products as luxury items was particularly driving the need to ensure production systems met community expectations.

"Twenty or 30 years ago, farm consultants were strongly emphasising the need to minimise cost of production per kilo of product.

"That's still important, but price factors now come much more into play. You can't sustain a 'luxury good' proposition if you don't meet the consumer's expectations for an ethical production system."

Dr Williams managed research and development at AWI to develop alternatives to mulesing in the early 2000s and said it was there he came to realise the impact sustainability issues could have on an industry.

"Since then, I've assisted a range of industries to develop strategic plans, including long-term visions for wine and wool, and sustainability has emerged as one of the key considerations in all of them."

Dr Williams said he was determined to help industry communicate its commitment to animal welfare, the environment and exceptional quality.

"For a start, we need to talk more about the fact that wool is natural, renewable, recyclable and biodegradable," he said.

"We are so much more aware of the problem of waste plastics and microplastics in the world - and textiles made from oil-derived polymers such as polyester are plastics."

He is also urging sheep and wool producers to share their stories.

"For example, look at Victorian prime lamb producers Tim and Georgie Leeming, from Paradoo Prime, who are removing adverse animal husbandry practices and have led the way in introducing human-grade pain relief on their property," he said.

"Similarly, wool, prime lamb and beef cattle producers Mark Wootton and Eve Kantor from Jigsaw Farms in western Victoria are committed to sharing the good news story of exceptional animal welfare standards and carbon neutral farming.

"These are the types of stories we should be telling because consumers increasingly expect us to offer products from a value chain that delivers a net positive long-term impact on the people, the animals and the environment we employ to bring those products to market."

New sustainable wool course on offer

Sustainability is the name of the game, as Australian Wool Innovation (AWI) has released its first online course on the topic.

The Sustainability and Wool course was developed by industry experts and is designed for brands, manufacturers, tertiary students, and tutors to support the industry's move towards less environmentally impactful product and business models with wool.

The freely available course provides an introduction to the concepts, frameworks, and strategies to support sustainable and restorative business in the textile industry.

With a focus on the wool fibre and wool industry, the course provides learners with the theory and practical examples of circular design, regenerative agriculture, and manufacturing processes with reduced environmental impacts within the wool supply chain.

AWI's Chief Executive John Roberts says the course is all about getting more understanding in the textile and fashion industry just how good wool is.

"At a time when many customers around the world are asking for more sustainable fashion the answer is clear - wear Australian wool. The more people who understand that wool is natural, biodegradable, and sustainable the more wool will be sold and that helps Australian woolgrowers".

"This course explores the key issues and questions relating to sustainable development, legislation, collaborative global goals, and ways to measure and manage our impacts on people and the planet," said Livia Firth, Co-Founder and Creative Director of Eco-Age.

"As a global community we have the opportunity to change how we operate, to responsibly work within the planet's boundaries, and to respect and protect the people throughout global supply chains."

Wool Market Report

By Australian Wool Innovation

Turbulent pricing featured throughout Australian wool auctions this week, but by the close of selling, negligible changes had been registered on the week-to-week comparison.

Most wool types and descriptions finished lower but within 5 to 10ac of the established basis.

In WA however, most Merino price indicators added 5 to 10ac to the values of last week.

Foreign exchange rates behaved more sedately this week, the exception being the Euro which strengthened against the Australian dollar.

Most commodity-linked currencies (such as the AUD) weakened 1.5 per cent against the Euro as crude oil prices fell after news of the USA planning to place vast parts of their strategic oil reserves onto the market.

Other significant news this week included a larger than expected decrease in Chinese manufacturing activity.

The Eastern Market Indicator (EMI) dropped by 0.6 per cent or 9ac to close at 1375 ac/clean kg.

In USD terms the EMI was 5usc lower and concluded the selling week at 1029 usc/clean kg.

Despite the gains on most of the individual Merino micron price guides in Fremantle, the Western Market Indicator (WMI) still dropped 6ac to 1418 ac/clean kg. Nationally, 86.9 per cent of all wool offered managed to find a buyer.

The first day of auctions this week produced negative price results across the type spectrum.

Losses of up to 40ac occurred as buyers cautiously and carefully approached purchasing as they quickly identified that local traders would be bearing the brunt of financing this week's auction transaction costs.

The off-shore-based buyers started the week off abnormally quiet, with the exception of the crossbred wool type purchasing indent from China.

With local buyers being willing to keep on buying early in the week, the final two days saw offshore interests first stabilise the market then inevitably push prices up to finish the week positively.

Next week's Australian auctions will be operating over two days Tuesday and Wednesday.

Currently, just under 50,000 bales are available for the trade.

Gardening

Art of the giant pumpkin

By Neil Fisher

I always love the start of the Agricultural Show circuit in Central Queensland.

And after the trouble that COVID has caused to our Agricultural Shows, I am looking forward to the Shows this year.

And for the gardener, Agricultural Shows will offer an array of unusual flowers and plants to observe.

Plus don't forget produce displays which I think could be bigger than past Agricultural Show.

This year Winton Pastoral and Agricultural Show have included the heaviest Pumpkin class in the Garden Section.

Such a great idea.

So if you live in the Winton Shire or if you live in a neighbouring Shire to Winton like the Longreach Regional Council area you could enter the year's Winton Pastoral and Agricultural Show.

Some years ago while viewing the produce display, at the Rockhampton Show I had the opportunity to meet a giant Pumpkin expert. John and Elaine Smith were past champion giant pumpkin growers from New South Wales.

In our discussion, he began to tell me about the 180 to 200 kg monster pumpkins that he had grown many years ago.

Being very keen to share his years of knowledge, I listened to him for the next hour and took notes on what he had to say.

So here, in the true spirit of passing down gardening experience, are Mr John Smiths 'words of giant pumpkin wisdom'.

He always recommends planting your Pumpkin seeds at the very end of spring, just as the season is changing to summer.

Always germinate the seeds in small pots first, but never overwater them as the seeds might rot.

Once the seeds have germinated, keep them in a warm sunny area until they have formed three leaves.

This is now the time to transplant them into a freshly prepared garden bed.

John described the perfect garden bed for transplanting as rather like a group of turkeys nests, with each mound being 30cm or 1 foot in height and 45cm or 18 inches wide and no closer than 3m apart.

Place one pumpkin seedling in the centre of each mound.

It is always best to water the ground around the mound, rather than watering the plant, as it is establishing, as he said that "pumpkins are a real mongrel for getting mildew" which is a fungus disease.

Fortunately, that should not pose too much of a problem here in the Central West.

He did say that this would be even harder for Coastal Queensland gardeners, due to our high humidity.

But if you do encounter that fungus disease a fungicide spray applied at fortnightly intervals is a necessity to keep the plants in top condition.

Fertilising pumpkin vines should occur once or twice weekly during the growing period with a water-soluble fertiliser that has a high potash content.

As the plants establish, it is quite common for all the male flowers on the Pumpkin to appear first, with the female flowers following up to ten to fourteen days later.

John said that one of the best assets to his garden was hives of Native Bees which assisted in cross-pollination.

However, he told me that one year his native bees disappeared and by taking a small paintbrush and swirling it around the inside of each flower and moving the pollen from flower to flower on the paintbrush, he was able to pollinate the flowers.

Would you believe that this was the year that he grew his 200kg monster!

The earlier the Pumpkin sets, the longer it has to grow till harvest and therefore will produce a heavier weight.

Another of John's handy hints was to select the two fastest-growing pumpkins on each vine and remove the rest.

The fewer pumpkins growing on the vines means the larger the individual pumpkins will grow.

John assured me that with all of these ingredients, you should be able to grow a show-stopping monster pumpkin.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Did you know that the largest pumpkin ever recorded was 480kg?

Gracie's latest comp swim

By Brooke Miller; Barcaldine Barracudas Swimming Club

Gracie Miller recently flew to Brisbane to attend her final swimming meets of the 2021-2022 season.

Saturday 19 March saw Gracie, a Barcaldine Yellowbelly, participate at the 2022 National Prep and Jess Schipper Challenge at the Brisbane Aquatic Centre in Chandler.

Throughout the day she achieved a new personal best time in the 50m freestyle qualifying her for the third year in a row in the Silver category of the Bio Island Australian Junior Excellence Program.

This was used as a warm-up for the Queensland School Sport Swimming Championships also held in Brisbane early the following week.

After missing out on attending in 2020 due to Covid, this was Gracie's second time representing the North West Region at the championships and she was excited and proud to be selected as the team captain in the opening ceremony.

Gracie and her teammates represented our region with excellence, pride, and fantastic sportsmanship.

Thank you to everyone involved in both carnivals for providing our rural and remote children with opportunities to continue to experience new adventures.

Grasshoppers, rain, and sunshine

Well after a big weekend last weekend, it was back to club competition games with a few games of social thrown in.

The much anticipated Championship Men's Singles game was between multiple times club champion Ray Harmsworth and Alan "Bub" Barbeler.

Bub's been in great form lately and Ray always sets the standard, so we have been waiting for the matchup.

Ray skipped out to a five nil lead and, after managing to miss all the grasshoppers on the green, he took it out to a 10-2 lead.

The grasshoppers seemed to want a close-up viewing of this tussle and weren't worried about getting run over, but it was the same for all bowlers early on.

Bub started to come back and got it to 10-12 before Ray stepped up again.

At 16-10, it looked like he'd got a good gap but Bub replied and tied the game up at 17 all on the 21st end.

Ray scored 7 shots on the next 3 ends to be 24-17 before Bub scored a rare 4 shots to be within 3.

BOWLS
BY BONES
TONY EMSLIE

Ray then scored another 7 shots in 4 ends to take the game 31-21.

Another singles game was a Ladies Championship game between two new bowlers being Selena Hayward and Baileigh.

Because both bowlers are starting out a singles game can be nerve-racking but experienced Paula Brun marked the game to offer advice pertaining to rules and processes and not shot selection.

Baileigh got out to a 6-1 lead before Selena settled and got the score back to 6-8 down.

Baileigh just kept drawing shots, but to Selena's credit, she scored 10 shots in 7 ends to be 18-21 down after 23 ends.

Baileigh then drew 12 shots in 6 ends to take the win 33-18.

Well done Baileigh and Selena.

The other very important game was the Men's Pairs Championship game to see who progressed to the final.

The game saw defending champs George Kent and Jason Barbeler up against John Hawkes and Peter Anderson.

Pairs games are played over 21 ends and after the 9th end it was 10 all, after the 11th end it was 12-11 to George and Jason. Unfortunately for Hawkesy and Pete they then got stuck on 11 shots and then 12 shots for 8 ends, in which time George and Jason had skipped out to a 26-12 lead which was too big of a gap for Hawkesy and Pete to close with just three ends to go.

The score finished 30-13 which means George and Jason now take on Peter Thurecht and Bub Barbeler in the 2022 final.

That will be worth watching!

Now I have to admit I didn't see the end of these games because as soon as it started to rain I was afraid of getting my hair wet, so I went home, but I hope I did the games justice via the scorecards."

Savouring the special moments that drive us all on

Much talk over recent times has been about Ash Barty retiring.

Longreach can claim a slim connection to Ash, as her Dad, Rob Barty, came out here a couple of years ago.

Rob came out West on a tour fully funded by Ash.

He answered all the tough questions about Ash with honesty, provided some inspiration to our local players and committee, and showed that the apple certainly grew from that tree.

It is understandable that professional athletes retire early.

Sure the money is great, but imagine living 80 per cent of the year in a hotel room, the constant strain on your body, and the intense focus of the world's media on your life.

However, for the humble social athlete, like most of us, you are a long-time retired.

I once played cricket with a bloke called Stan, he was 72, his dad was the last white West Indian captain.

He took a catch at slip in one game that season and fell forward onto the ground, Stan didn't move, and I feared the worst.

He eventually got up and said he wanted to savour the catch, as it might be his last.

As I get ready for a night of tennis, and next month hoping to play in the annual Queensland Masters Hockey tournament in Rockhampton, I don't have the pedigree of Stan but I love my sport just as much.

My preparation, which has never been the best, is ensuring I have comfy shoes and a ready supply of nurofen, pretty similar to Ash Barty coming into the Australian Open I'm sure.

I hope to resume playing cricket next season and have been known to grace the Longreach Athletics track on the odd occasion.

Both my body and my lovely wife occasionally suggest I am better off stopping, but I think both know that at least mentally I am better off continuing.

It is great to see men and women even more senior than myself continuing to play and be actively involved in sports in Longreach such as bowls, tennis, athletics, and park run, because when you stop being involved in sport its not only your body that misses out but your mind as well.

So play until you can not, then try another sport, always stay involved, then you, the sport, and your community will reap the benefits.

New track stars emerge

By Rob Luck; Longreach Jockey Club

The Barcoo Amateur Race Club on Saturday had a massive eight-race program at Blackall.

The three additional races were courtesy of Racing Queensland, following the abandonment of the Alpha meeting due to some well-needed rain in the area on the previous Saturday.

The club was inundated with nominations with maximum fields for several of the races; and consequently, did a great job of ensuring trainers had temporary tie-up stalls in place for their horses during the afternoon, as the club has smaller numbers of permanent stables on course.

Blackall has a tendency of producing some stars out of its program in recent years; Boingo is an open-company mare that comes to mind who won its maiden race there by something like 11 lengths and has gone on to be of the standard of a Battle of the Bush participant in recent years.

Sisalating, the ill-fated galloper for Todd Austin, commenced its career there with a huge margin, continuing on to be undefeated in nine starts in the central west.

Saturday was no different, the Class 3 plate saw Mori's Press for the Shane Iverson stable combine with jockey Brooke Richardson to dominate the race by ten and three-quarter lengths to defeat No Innuendo, a last start winner at Longreach, and Nixie Boy.

Mori's Press has already stated itself as a promising galloper since January, winning at the Sunshine Coast and placing second at Ipswich and Toowoomba.

The galloper won its Longreach maiden back on 2 November and has progressed rapidly through to Class 3 standard.

One may ask, 'why go to Blackall?'

Trainer Shane Iverson indicated Mori's Press could be set for the Battle of the Bush series, and to do so, it needs five non-TAB runs before the first heat.

Mori's Press now only has two non-TAB runs to compete in.

Going by the win on Saturday, we're going to see a lot more of this mare dominating its classes as it moves through to open company.

It could not be more impressive, with Brooke Richardson stating post-race she simply had to 'push the button on the home turn', and Mori's Press accelerated, changing gears, and raced away to a comfortable win.

Ms Richardson, basically, had an armchair ride.

More is to be seen from this press statement mare - an exciting galloper coming through the ranks in country racing.

It wasn't long before, in race 7, in the Frame Rural Agencies' benchmark 55, we saw another promising mare in Portobelle, a four-year-old mare by Scissor Kick for Mark Oates and Robbie Faehr.

They combined to dominate the race by almost three lengths defeating last start winner, Mandeville Rocker and The Landing.

This galloper is part-owned by Tambo club stalwart Billy Rogers, and Bill indicated post-race the mare has a likening for this track having won three from four in its last start the 26 February and also winning over 1400m.

They've been patient with the mare which showed promise as a two and three-year-old - and now coming to maturity - and I'm sure Mark Oates will program the future races for Portobelle carefully; more is to be seen of this galloper as she reaches maturity.

Robbie Faehr is continuing to ride in good form and in recent weeks has posted multiple winners, including doubles, and Saturday was the case again.

Prior to the win on Portobelle, he combined with Tony Williams from Charleville with a galloper called Cultural Icon, winning its maiden.

This is a three-year-old by One Gina, who is having its second run for the stable, it is an ex-Victorian provincial horse.

It is only its fifth career start, and Faehr was quite impressed with the ability, and due to the rawness this galloper showed in the run - the immaturity - it ran out comfortably to defeat Epic Reign, which had attempted to lead throughout for Craig Smith and Shane McGovern - and Rebel Wowzer an improved run into third after also being up on the pace and showing speed.

Faehr believes that Cultural Icon, even though it was only a maiden win at Blackall, has the ability to progress through the classes.

It didn't take Roma trainer Craig Smith too long to gain a win on the day, combining with Shane McGovern and Lucky Enuuff in the Alpha Ratings Band 0 - 55 handicap.

This rich enough four-year-old gelding was second up, and it recorded win number two from 15 starts when it proved a little too strong for Cozhecancan which was an impressive first-up run as he will enjoy longer distances than the 1200 metres, with Louie the Legend a promising third for the Todd Austin stable.

With less than a length covering these three runners, the form can be taken from the race, with all runners able to progress on to better wins in future.

Jockey Emma Bell recorded her first-ever ride as a senior jockey - no longer an apprentice - and it was her second day back riding at the races in 2022.

She joined with Clinton Austin on Rosaire - a four-year-old mare by Olympic Glory - that recorded win number two from 17 starts.

Ms Bell indicated post-race that Rosaire was one pace, so she used her speed to sit with the lead and proved too strong coming into the straight - was able to gain a break and maintain that to the line, defeating Wild Element and Strawberry Blonde.

Blackall trainer Clinton Austin in winning that race was the first local trainer to record a win on the day, and it started with some lucrative odds of $11.

It didn't take long for Blackall trainer David Rewald to join in the winning proceedings with a quinella result in the Alpha Got the Rain Open Handicap over 1050 metres, when Heaven's High - a So You Think six-year-old mare - second-up from a spell showed abundant speed to be placed right on the lead as hammers and coming into the straight gained the inside run for Ric McMahon and was able to shoot clear and hold off Zilitor, ridden by Brooke Richardson also for David Rewald.

McMahon's strength at the finish was able to get Heaven's High up over Zilitor by a long neck, with the Raymond Frazer trained, Vinaigrette - an improved run into third, albeit it, over five lengths away in third place.

Heaven's High has now had six wins from 32 starts with nine minor placings and showed enough last campaign that it could be a sprinter that could be competitive in coming race meetings.

Winton Devils' right stuff

Winton Junior Rugby League Club

Winton Junior Devils travelled to Townsville to participate in the 2022 Laurie Spina Shield.

Our Devils played five games on the first day and two games on Saturday in the wet!

We were up against teams from Emerald, Jimboomba, Mackay, Townsville, Proserpine and Rockhampton and held our own in attack and defence.

A team from each pool was selected to play at Queensland Country Bank Stadium as a curtain raiser to the Cowboys and Roosters.

Our team was selected from Pool 5 for showing great sportsmanship and attitude which means the world to all of us.

Harry and Mandy also represented the Devils in the lap of honour and eight of our players participated in the Fastest Feet team relay.

Special thanks to Elijah and Charlii for swapping from Tigers to Devils for the weekend.

We think Devil colours suit you.

And Amber - once a Devil, always a Devil.

A huge thank you to Dan, Carly, Campbell, and Mandy for coaching, training and organising our Devils, last weekend for our Under 11.

Thanks to our sponsors: Corella Cattle Company, Searles Outback Store, Ellgra Contracting, and Searle's Cattle Transport.
