Hard hit by fuel prices

Many have been hit hard at the bowser in recent months, and the effects have been more strongly felt in the west than on the coast.

The average price in Brisbane is currently approximately 30 cents less than it is in the central west.

Yet more than ever local, family-owned fuel businesses need local support.

Weeds lovin' the west

Remember no matter if you are a landholder, resident, ratepayer, renter, contractor or traveller, everyone has a General Biosecurity Obligation (GBO) to take all reasonable and practical steps to minimise the risks associated with invasive plants.

Invasive plants should never be placed onto town commons, stock routes, or other people's properties, vacant land or environmental areas; nor should they be dumped at a refuse dump.

Central Western Queensland has the right temperate zone for all invasive plants to grow exponentially.

Bang-on budget

The Winton Shire Council has released its 2021 budget with an increase to rates and services charges of 2.5 per cent, in what it has justified as being "well below" the current national inflation rate of 5.1 per cent.

Shire Mayor Gavin Baskett said the closing financial year had been a busy one and a successful one for the Winton Shire Council.

"A total of $7 million in Capital Works Projects and Operating Expenses will be carried forward to the new financial year," he said.

"This is due to the size of the Capital Works Budget, the difficulty in sourcing contractors, the lingering effects of Covid and the shortage of applicants to fill many of the vacant roles within Council.

"These are not just issues for Winton but are being experienced nationwide."

The Winton Shire Council will continue to offer a 15 per cent discount on Rates and Service Charge to those who pay in the discount period.

"The rates incentive draw has been maintained along with rates concessions for first home buyers and investment in residential dwellings and commercial / business renovation or construction," Mayor Gavin Baskett said.

The Winton Shire Council have adopted a new Corporate Plan for the next five years.

"This is a very important document that will guide elected members' and Council's decision-making for the next five years, Mayor Gavin Baskett said.

"The 22/27 Corporate Plan has been developed with consultation and feedback from the community, staff and elected members.

"The Budget for 2022/23 will total $51.4m

(comprising $26.2m in operating expenditure and $25.2 in capital expenditure).

"When the depreciation expense of $5.3m is deducted, this still leaves a budget of $46.1m."

Among the many focuses of the 2022/23 budget, Mayor Baskett said services to families, youth, rural residents and the elderly will be prioritised.

"Many of these services are essential to our community's well-being and development," he said.

Should we start considering wearing masks again?

I know they are dreaded things, I have not started again myself.

But, I was wondering what might be your thoughts on masks.

Currently, the central west is seeing a large influx of tourists, and the country is having one of its largest wave of cases to date.

We're not out of the woodwork with Covid even though it may seem like it.

I think a lot of us have rubber banded to old behaviours since Covid "ended" and we received our vaccines.

But as many people who have had the vaccines have expressed, it can still "knock you around" and is deeply affecting our already limited workforce.

So what do you think, have you begun wearing masks again?

Looking at the Longreach rainfall

By OPS Australia

Rainfall is critically important to our region, it affects every aspect of our environment, our economy and our wellbeing.

It affects our regional economy both for those on the land and also for those within our towns.

Extended periods of below-average rainfall take its toll on us.

Drought is tough.

And when it does rain, we typically need to wait until the roads dry up and become passable.

Rainfall has a tremendously strong impact on the Longreach region and all of outback Australia. Let us look at our historical and recent rainfall. Let us use the Longreach airport as an example.

Data has been collected at the airport since the early 1950's providing us with 70 years of historical data.

It is noted that rainfall can vary greatly within our region and the specific rainfall at different locations will vary.

But nonetheless, the airport rainfall data does provide some interesting insight.

The average annual rainfall for Longreach is 420mm. We note that this is close to the annual Australian rainfall of 416mm.

In most years the annual rainfall is between 220 and 460mm.

About half of the annual rainfalls in the 70-year history fall within this range.

We are emerging from a tough period of low rainfall.

The average annual rainfall for the last ten years is 308mm, with four of these years having an annual rainfall of less than half our annual average.

It is noted that 2020 with 372mm and 2021 with 312mm are still both below our annual average rainfall.

However, 2022 is promising to be different.

By the end of June, the airport had already received 353mm.

If we use the typical monthly distribution of rainfall, we should expect the annual 2022 rainfall at the airport to be 535mm.

This is well above our monthly average.

Bring on the rain!

Nurses excited to be here

By Michael R Williams

A second group of 14 new nursing graduates have started work at various central west hospitals, following a group of 16 graduates from February.

Central West Health Executive Director of Nursing and Midwifery Services Lyndal Cordaro said the total 2022 intake of new graduate nurses was a record for the health service.

"At 30, it's the largest annual cohort of graduate nurses or midwives taken on by Central West Health since the formation of the hospital and health services in 2012," she said.

Graduate nurses Ebony Tarrant and Jacinta Powell said they had chosen Central West Health because of its reputation.

"My friends who had done it previously specifically spoke about the support they had compared to other graduate programs," Ms Tarrant said.

"They said there was heaps of opportunity to branch out into different training and experiences, and that you can progress quite far in such a short term.

"I think it's also really good that they [Central West Health] have partnered with CQ University and can offer that graduate certificate."

Ms Powell said she believed Central West Health was able to build up a reputation from the unique locations it offers.

"The fact that we can gain such a large variety of knowledge from experiences and situations gives us an edge over metropolitan programs," she said.

Both Ms Tarrant and Ms Powell said they cannot wait to get involved with local community events.

"My roommate just got back from the camel races, and apparently there is something on almost every weekend," Ms Tarrant said.

"I've been here since Friday, and already, people have been so friendly."

Ill disposed to far-flung health service

By Michael R Williams

While a majority of those surveyed have not had to use the services at Rockhampton Hospital, a slim majority of those who had reported having a positive experience.

Many, anonymously, have described visits as a "toss of the coin" with some, who have had to visit after breaking a bone or for other immediate surgery needs, being grateful for having their surgery done in a timely manner.

However, there have been a number of "horror stories" from Rockhampton Hospital and it has garnered a reputation.

Particularly, it has been a known issue for the local member of parliament, Lachlan Millar who said it has been an issue across the Gregory electorate. Mr Millar said he found that it was patients who are more reliant on the public health system who find themselves caught in said horror situations.

"Most horror stories relate to patient travel with most of the worst scenarios being where someone (often elderly or alone) is airlifted out to Rockhampton when their needs cannot be met at the local hospital," he said.

"When this occurs, they often then end up in emergency in Rockhampton and sat in a cubicle chair until a bed can be assigned.

"I have had an incident recently where an elderly gentleman was sent to Rockhampton from Longreach and had to stay in the Emergency department of the base hospital for three days as they could not allocate him a bed.

"On release from the base hospital many constituents have very real difficulty in getting home (they have been transferred to Rockhampton by air—RFDS) but then must make their own way home.

"As you can imagine this can be very distressful (many people have no family or friends in Rockhampton so are isolated).

"Not to mention financially burdensome.

"This is a very common issue and even when Rockhampton Base is aware that the patient is rural and no real assistance is provided."

Mr Millar is calling for change through the health inquiry, and directly to the health minister, for a patient discharge plan to be in place before rural and regional patients are released from hospitals.

"That discharge should not occur until a clear and direct path home is arranged," he said.

Correction on where profits go

In a recent story on grocery prices, we wrote that the Longreach Foodworks puts "100 per cent" of its profits back into the community.

Owner Rose Leggett would like to correct the record stating that instead, they put "a large portion of their profits back into the community".

Continue supporting local

By Michael R Williams

Many have been hit hard at the bowser in recent months, and the effects have been more strongly felt in the west than on the coast.

The average price in Brisbane is currently approximately 30 cents less than it is in the central west.

Yet more than ever local, family-owned fuel businesses need local support.

Palmer's BP business owner John Palmer said freight costs had gone through the roof for his business.

"It's just like if you buy a pair of boots in Longreach versus buying a pair of boots in Brisbane—it's the same story," he said.

"When you're paying 14/ 15 cents a litre to get the fuel up here and you go to put it in your tank, and they're not doing the same in Brisbane all of a sudden that's passed on to the customer.

"It's a freight charge."

Mr Palmer said the BP had taken their fuel prices down a few cents over the week and is always looking to keep their prices competitive, but he did not know how long prices were going to stay up.

"But how long is a piece of string? and I'm not saying that just to be funny," he said.

"We're only as good as the price that comes in—we get fuel three times a week, and then we work off those prices.

"We do try to hold fuel to prices if we expect they might go up so we can pass on savings to the customer."

Palmer's BP is also a big supporter of the community and uses much of its profits to support community groups such as the Longreach Athletics Club.

"It's that or you can buy a bike," said business partner Sue Palmer.

Business owner John Palmer hopes locals understand fuel prices have affected his business as well.

Freight business hurting

Businesses in the central west are beginning to feel the pinch as fuel prices skyrocket.

Fuel prices are rising throughout the country, but it is mostly being felt in the central west.

Western Freight Link business owner Jeffrey Winter said fuel is a major expense to his business.

"And it's not just fuel, it's every major input cost that we come across," he said.

"It has basically skyrocketed over the past few financial years.

"To give you an indication—June 2020 we spent $4,000 on fuel, June just gone we spent $8,300 on fuel.

"We're, basically, doing the same run, there's nothing out of the ordinary there."

Up until the last few months Mr Winter said his company had copped rising prices on the chin, but now his company has had no choice but to pass the buck on to his clients.

"Everything's gone up, whether you buy a tyre, pay your rego, insurance had gone up 15 per cent prior to this," he said.

"We know for a fact that insurance will probably be going up another 10-15 per cent again next year.

"We've been holding on, hoping things will get better, but we know for a fact it's not going to get better—I don't foresee it getting better in the next 6-12 months."

Mr Winter said he had no plans to give up on his family business, but he would have to be wary of troubling times ahead.

"I don't see any shining light on the horizon between now and Christmas, and January/ February is our least busy times of the year," he said.

"I don't see improvement for the next 12 months."

Mr Winter said more should be done from a governmental standpoint to support fuel-heavy businesses like Western Freight Link.

"A barrel of oil is only $100 a barrel give or take, I don't understand why we're paying $2.50 a litre for fuel," he said.

"And the government took 20 cents off, so we should be paying $2.70 a litre.

"There's no reason that I can think of as to why we're paying that much, a barrel of oil has been that much before—I do understand our Aussie dollar is around 60 cents right now, but the cost of fuel is excessive."

When the coalition introduced fuel excises earlier this year, they reworked fuel rebates for trucking companies like Western Freight Link, Mr Winter said this has led to consumer prices going up.

"Every truck that used that fuel and delivered your groceries, they couldn't claim that rebate (around 42 cents a litre)," he said.

"Joe-blow the customer certainly didn't pay for it at the bowser, but he certainly paid for it when he bought his groceries or anything else."

Overwhelming support for Longreach maternity services

After a survey was conducted on how satisfied patients felt with Longreach Hospital's maternity service, results showed "overwhelming satisfaction and support". Central West Hospital and Health Service Senior Medical Officer Dr Kirsten Symmons said the survey showed the maternity service was very highly regarded. The survey targeted women who had their babies while living in the Central West between 2019 and 2021 and received 60 full responses.

"About 70 per cent of the women who responded had their births in Longreach, while the remainder chose to give birth outside the region," Dr Symmons said.

"Nearly 92 per cent of women who responded had their antenatal care in the Central West, either directly through the public maternity service or through a combination of public maternity service and shared care with their GP.

"While the remainder chose antenatal care through a private obstetrician, they all had some care also delivered through Central West Health GPs and midwives.

"A total of 88 per cent of respondents indicated high satisfaction levels with their antenatal care through the public maternity service and 92.6 per cent were highly satisfied with their antenatal care delivered through shared care with their GP and the public system.

"About 95 per cent of respondents said they would deliver in Longreach again and recommend it to others, an increase on the 88 per cent recorded in the 2019 survey.

"These are very positive results and I believe the Longreach Hospital maternity unit should be very proud of what has been achieved."

Dr Symmons said the results of the latest survey, like the 2019 survey, would be used to develop future enhancements to the maternity service.

"For instance, the 2019 survey indicated 100 per cent of women were either satisfied or very satisfied with their appointments by telehealth and with the convenience of not having to travel being one of the main reasons," she said.

"As a result of the 2019 survey result, we looked at further optimising the use of telehealth wherever possible, especially for outlying towns.

"This has paid dividends with 23.3 per cent of women now receiving telehealth appointments, compared with just 6.2 per cent in the 2019 survey.

"But we can't rest on our laurels.

"We are continually looking at ways we can improve our maternity and birthing services and what we can do better.

"Continuing feedback from our clients is a vital element in helping maintain high standards of service."

Dr Symmons said around 60 babies a year, on average, were born at Longreach Hospital.

She said the Longreach Hospital unit operated as a Midwifery Group Practice, where each woman was assigned a known midwife who would provide most of her care pre, during and post-birth. For a woman who lives out of Longreach, her midwife will liaise with the local midwifery staff in her community.

Women also have the options of shared care with their regular GP, including visiting Royal Flying Doctor Service doctors, or public care with a GP obstetrician at Longreach hospital.

Dr Symmons said the Longreach Hospital maternity unit offered three single ensuite rooms, a birth suite, a maternity assessment room, a nursery, and an equipment room.

"The three single rooms on the maternity ward are big rooms with an ensuite but also an area with a sink where mums can give their babies baths," she said.

"The birthing suite importantly also allows space for family to be with a woman and the birthing team during the birth of a baby if they choose.

"More than 97 per cent of women who delivered in Longreach reported that they were satisfied with the Longreach Hospital birth suite and maternity ward.

"We also have on-site accommodation at no cost at Longreach Hospital for women in the lead up to giving birth from 36 weeks onwards.

"This is particularly convenient for women who live away from Longreach.

"Fifty-two per cent of women who delivered in Longreach stayed in the free accommodation provided by Central West Health.

"Of these women, 81.8 per cent reported that this contributed to their decision to deliver in Longreach and 90.9 per cent were satisfied with the accommodation provided."

Dr Symmons said the maternity unit's midwifery staff were supported by allied health professionals and General Practitioners with advanced training in obstetrics.

"In addition to our Longreach Midwifery Group Practice midwives at the birthing unit, our Central West Health midwives also provide outreach ante and postnatal services throughout the region, as does our partner the Royal Flying Doctor Service," she said.

"Our Child Health team also plays a big part in our comprehensive service.

"For women who have complications in their pregnancy, the Longreach maternity team has close contact with maternal foetal medicine, obstetric medicine and perinatal mental health teams at several tertiary hospitals.

"We help coordinate reviews with these teams, often by telehealth.

"Many of these women go on to deliver in Longreach.

"All in all, we have an excellent maternity service for the Central West here at Longreach."

Rates up by 2.5 per cent

The Winton Shire Council has released its 2021 budget with an increase to rates and services charges of 2.5 per cent, in what it has justified as being “well below” the current national inflation rate of 5.1 per cent.

Shire Mayor Gavin Baskett said the closing financial year had been a busy one and a successful one for the Winton Shire Council.

“A total of $7 million in Capital Works Projects and Operating Expenses will be carried forward to the new financial year,” he said.

“This is due to the size of the Capital Works Budget, the difficulty in sourcing contractors, the lingering effects of Covid and the shortage of applicants to fill many of the vacant roles within Council.

“These are not just issues for Winton but are being experienced nationwide.”

The Winton Shire Council will continue to offer a 15 per cent discount on Rates and Service Charge to those who pay in the discount period.

“The rates incentive draw has been maintained along with rates concessions for first home buyers and investment in residential dwellings and commercial / business renovation or construction,” Mayor Gavin Baskett said.

The Winton Shire Council have adopted a new Corporate Plan for the next five years.

“This is a very important document that will guide elected members’ and Council’s decision-making for the next five years, Mayor Gavin Baskett said.

“The 22/27 Corporate Plan has been developed with consultation and feedback from the community, staff and elected members.

“The Budget for 2022/23 will total $51.4m (comprising $26.2m in operating expenditure and $25.2 in capital expenditure).

“When the depreciation expense of $5.3m is deducted, this still leaves a budget of $46.1m.”

Among the many focuses of the 2022/23 budget, Mayor Baskett said services to families, youth, rural residents and the elderly will be prioritised.

“Many of these services are essential to our community’s well-being and development,” he said.

The Capital Works is another essential part of the budget and will be allocated almost $25.2m, with an emphasis on the renewal and replacement of ageing infrastructure.

“The projects selected will keep our community thriving for the next financial year and provide a wide range of opportunities for our local contractors and businesses while keeping Council’s workforce busy,” Mayor Baskett said.

“The Capital Works program consists of: Engineering Projects, $16,685,174; Water & Sewerage, $650,700; Development Projects, $2,894,910; Community & Cultural Projects, $2,757,441; Administration & Finance Projects, $538,423; Plant Purchases, $1,210,000; and Building Works, $450,996.

“The largest component of the capital budget is the Engineering projects totalling almost $16.7m.

“There are several significant road construction projects planned over the next 12 months; upgrade of approximately 7km of the Kennedy Development Road, approximately 6km on the Winton—Richmond Road, and the first section of a three-year program to complete the sealing of the road to Lark Quarry.

“These projects will not only increase connectivity across the shire but create a continuity of work for our road construction crews.

“Hopefully, we can continue these projects over the coming years to create a safe and secure road network.”

Mayor Baskett said Rural Services will also be a key priority of the incoming budget.

“Council will continue to support ongoing programs and initiatives such as Wild Dog Management with $308,000 committed to the Wild Dog Baiting Program (including labour) and continued management and upgrading of our Stock Routes & Saleyard Facilities,” he said.

“The lifeblood of any rural grazing industry is the local road network being maintained at an appropriate standard.

“Council has once again committed $1,400,000 for the rural road maintenance budget.

“There is also a budget of $300,000 allocated for grid installation, cleaning, and repairs.

“Council has been successful in obtaining in excess of $7.9m for Flood Damage restoration and emergent works from the 2021/22 rain events.

“Such work will continue our aim of improving the standard of our road network that totals in excess of 2400km.

“This funding will enable Council to maintain an active external workforce and the engagement of local contractors that provide such a great service to the Winton Shire.”

Mayor Baskett said of the newer and most important initiatives to be implemented by Council will be the First Nations Closing the Gap Strategy.

“This, we hope, will go a long way to closing the gap with our indigenous residents,” he said.

“We have not only funded this strategy to target the actions to be developed but also to complete the Indigenous Map of the Winton Shire that’s planned to be etched into the concrete in Elderslie Street.

“While endeavouring to create a budget for all the shire we have maintained a substantial amount in reserves of $8.1m. This will help fund important projects in the future.

“Finally, I would like to thank Councillors, Directors, and Staff for the time and effort they’ve put into this budget.”

Mr Baskett said “balancing a budget while maintaining essential services and developing a capital works program, during these difficult times, is getting tougher each year, especially with only 12.5 per cent of our revenue being generated from Rates and Utility Charges”.

“Council is committed to making Winton a prosperous community that will continue thriving into the future.”

Girl Guides collect long line for Men’s Shed fundraiser

By Michael R Williams

As a part of their fundraising efforts, the Longreach Brolga Girl Guides raised $314.85 for the Longreach Men’s Shed.

Unit Leader and District Manager of the Longreach Brolga Girl Guides Kat Oliver said it was the club’s way of saying thanks to the Men’s Shed for helping with shelving needed for the Girl Guides’ house.

“We did a coin line because we’ve seen it work in the past,” she said.

“Usually people buy a snag from our sausage sizzle and then put their change in the line. “It works great.” Longreach Men’s Shed Chairman Bill Parker said the money is likely to go toward a new tool.

“We want to get some tool we can associate with the Girl Guides,” he said.

“We want them to come up with the name of the tool.”

The Girl Guides made a coin line as a way of enticing donations, here is Kat Oliver in the background.

Kat Oliver, along with the Longreach Brolga Girl Guides helped raise funds for the Longreach Men’s Shed. Here is James Mill, Kev Moody, Bruce McClymont, Kaz Mitchell, and Bill Parker with Kat Oliver.

Such a lot to cover in Big-Day-In event

I'd like to thank everybody for their patience recently while Council offices, libraries, and childcare were closed for our annual Big-Day-In event. It's a very important day for our team; we have staff spread through 19 departments working across 40,000 square kilometres.

The Big-Day-In is an important opportunity to get them all together once a year for a full day of training and professional development.

The sessions cover the breadth and scope of work undertaken by Council, which is extensive. This year's event was a great success and many staff have said it was the best one yet, so well done to our organising team. At the Big-Day-In we also present our employee excellence awards, recognising the performance of individuals and teams over the past year.

It was an honour for Councillors to be asked to present these awards, and can I offer my sincere congratulations to all the nominees and recipients including:

- Individual Excellence Award Recipient Johnathon Uprichard – Plumber in the Water and Sewerage gang
- Team Excellence Award recipients – Longreach Childcare Centre staff
- Apprentice / Trainee Excellence Award joint recipients Anna White and Quinten Gardiner
- Leadership/Management Excellence Award runner up George Woodfield – Supervisor of Ilfracombe Construction Gang
- and Leadership/Management Excellence Award recipient Elissa Balke – Director of Childcare Services

It's important to celebrate success, and it was great to be on hand to do that with our whole team. Council had its July meeting in Longreach last week.

We were scheduled to hold the meeting in Yarak but had to change the venue because of the overnight rain.

We love bringing our meetings out into our communities, so we'll be looking to get to Yarak for a future meeting soon.

It was a good meeting and we considered a number of items in addition to the usual reports and community funding applications.

Can I congratulate Jovan Taiki and Rae Hokianga on their outstanding performance representing Australia in the Quick Shears at the Royal Welsh Show in the United Kingdom?

It's great to see locals competing on the world stage, and it was a pleasure to grant them both a Mayoral Donation, which is a program designed for locals that are called on to represent the region in their field.

Another great outcome from our Council meeting was the awarding of a tender that will see local manufacturer JT Cox supply pre-cast concrete culverts for a Council roadworks project. This is a great outcome for Council and the community, as it supports a local business and saves ratepayers money by procuring materials locally that would otherwise have to be ordered specially.

As always, you can find our Council Meeting agendas and minutes on our website.

If there's anything you want to know more about, reach out to one of your Councillors.

The CEO and I attended the biennial LGAQs Bush Councils Convention in Barcaldine this week. It's the first one since 2019 so it was good to see it come back.

The convention is a good opportunity to share insights with friends and colleagues from other rural and remote councils across the state. We received updates on the work of the LGAQ Policy Executive and the Rural and Remote Councils Compact, which is in its first year.

We heard from Screen Queensland, the Queensland Tourism Industry Council, and various government departments as well.

It was a pleasure to present on a panel discussing attraction, retention, and economic development, for our regions.

Dog registration renewal notices were issued this week.

They're due on the 15 August and it's a state law requirement for all dogs over three months of age to be registered.

There are some exceptions for working dogs but only if they are actually kept on rural land.

If you live in town and have a working dog, you're still required to register it.

Registration is not only the law; it's a key ingredient in responsible pet ownership, like an extra level of protection for your best friend.

Registration helps reunite lost pets with their owners—particularly if the registration tag is attached to the collar and the animal is microchipped.

It's important to keep registration details up to date, so if you've moved, or if any of your dog's details have changed, be sure to let us know.

I'll be back with another column in two weeks. Until then, you can find direct emails and phone numbers for me and for each of my fellow Councillors at longreach.qld.gov.au/elected-members.

If you want to know anything at all, reach out to one of us – or contact Council directly on (07) 4658 4111 (24hrs), or via email to assist@longreach.qld.gov.au.

Longreach Regional Council Mayor Tony Rayner has had a meeting in Canbetta with the relevant cabinet members under the new Labor Government including Prime Minister, Anthony Albanese as well as: Minister Murray Watt, Agricultural Minister; Minister Linda Burney, Minister for Indigenous Australians, and Minister Kristy McBain, Minister for Regional Development and Local Government.

This was an opportunity for the Mayor to discuss relevant matters including water security and for support in repurposing the Longreach Pastoral College.

Mayor Rayner has also confirmed to have had a phone call with Agricultural Minister Mark Furner who stated the State Government are planning the sale of the Longreach Pastoral College, all but confirming the State Government will not be repurposing the infrastructure themselves.

Longreach Regional Council have begun negotiations with Yurika EV on the implementation of electric vehicle charging stations in the region as a part of the State Government's Queensland Electric Superhighway. Council has explicitly stated they wish the Licensing Agreement to "include an ability for Council to insist on the removal of the relevant infrastructure at the end of the lease term/s, should this be required by Council".

Council have granted the Longreach Yellowbelly Classic a total of $6,885.80 for their event on 26-28 Augusts, including a financial grant of $6,326, and in kind donations of the use of three Gazebos at $315, and a six-piece stage at $244.80.

Mayoral donations have been granted to the following sports people:

- Alix Heslin has been given $350 to attend the 10-12 North West Touch Football Championships on 16-19 June 2022.
- Alix Heslin has also been given $350 to attend the 11-12 Rugby League Championships on 23-28.
- Jovan Taiki has been given $1,000 to attend the Welsh International Speed Shears on 12-27 July.
- Rae Hokianga has also been given $1,000 to attend the Welsh International Speed Shears on 12-27 July.

ILSC launches nationwide engagement with First Nations

By Indigenous Land and Sea Corporation

The Indigenous Land and Sea Corporation (ILSC) has launched the most comprehensive engagement process in its history, consulting with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples about the return and management of the Country.

Indigenous Australians across the nation are being asked to have their say about how they want to engage with the ILSC and how the organisation can best partner with them to meet their aspirations for the Country. The ILSC is a corporate Commonwealth entity which manages the $2 billion Land and Sea Future Fund, which in the last 27 years has been used to purchase and return 6.4 million hectares of Country to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander corporations. The extensive nationwide National Indigenous Land and Sea Strategy (NILSS) engagement process will include expert roundtables, an online survey, a hotline and face-to-face consultations in more than 40 locations around the nation.

"The ILSC's chief purpose is to support Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples in the return and management of Country for their social, cultural and economic benefit," said Group CEO Joe Morrison.

"It is important that the ILSC keeps pace with the evolving aspirations and needs that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples have for their Country.

"We want to ensure our relationship is based on mutual understanding. We want to drive action and change that amplifies the voices of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

"The NILSS engagement is an opportunity to have a genuine conversation about Indigenous Australians' ideas, aspirations, challenges and opportunities.

"We strongly encourage Indigenous Australians to take part in this engagement so that we can better understand their aspirations and how we can elevate them to achieve their goals."

The ILSC has prepared summary material with general questions for feedback along with a selection of factsheets devised in consultation with Indigenous experts operating in speciality areas including agribusiness, bushfoods, water, renewables and carbon.

The in-person consultations are taking place in urban, regional and remote locations.

They began on Friday 3 June and will wrap up in early August. Following the engagement, the ILSC will produce a draft document that will be circulated to Indigenous partners and stakeholders for their feedback.

The final report will set the ILSC's strategic direction and operations for the next three to five years. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples are invited to have their say by visiting: <https://www.ilsc.gov.au/nilss>

Pig cull key to FMD prep

By Michael R Williams

As Australia braces itself for the potential threat of foot and mouth disease, local interest groups including RAPAD and Desert Channels Queensland have urged locals to remain vigilant and not to panic.

Desert Channels Queensland, in particular, is confident in their pig baiting and culling programs to maintain feral pig numbers which would curb the spread of the disease in the central west.

As a community, the central west's economy is largely dependent on livestock, so the potential for destruction locally is high; however, careful management can help minimise the risk of loss of livestock.

Desert Channels CEO Leanne Kohler said managing pigs was essential in curbing the spread of the disease as foot and mouth can easily be spread between feral animals such as pigs to domestic animals if not monitored correctly.

"And there are huge costs involved in that, if there were an outbreak in Australia it could devastate the livestock industry," she said.

"There hasn't been an outbreak of foot and mouth in Australia since 1872, you don't want this coming into the country at all.

"The economic impact of the livestock industry is over $52 billion, and that was in 2012, in today's climate it's estimated to be over $100 billion."

Operations Manager Simon Wiggins said the animal that catches the disease would be deemed inedible as the animal's health declines, however, the disease does not affect humans.

"There's no animal-related sector out here that would not be affected by a potential outbreak," he said.

"We need to be cautious but not panic. "One of the critical elements occurs at international borders, and already at the Federal level people are not being allowed to bring in pork-based products from countries with a known outbreak."

Feral pigs at a billabong.

Mr Wiggins said now, more than ever, farmers needed to be aware of their farm biosecurity rules.

"Yes it might be about foot and mouth, but those rules also relate to weeds and other animal management," he said.

"A heightened sense of alertness is not unreasonable."

A major player in the foot and mouth story is that of feral pigs, DCQ already put in extensive practices in pig management.

"There's a northern line which runs from Barcaldine to Winton to Boulia and a southern line," he said.

"In total there are about 50 monitoring sites and they cover the critical areas where we know the pigs fill up in numbers quite quickly.

"As a part of that process, DCQ has, with funding from the Federal Government, done pest animal control work."

Mr Wiggins said as funding has diminished, DCQ has been providing bullets and other equipment to landholders to help manage pig numbers.

"They are regularly shooting and regularly getting large numbers of pigs," he said.

"The limited numbers of pigs people currently see, is because of the efforts of a number of dedicated landholders in the Windorah, Birdsville, Boulia area.

"With limited resources, they've been actually holding a very good line in areas where the pigs build in numbers very quickly."

After recent rains, monitoring devices are saying pig numbers are increasing, however, Mr Wiggins believes the efforts of local landholders has been sufficient to manage numbers and limit disease spread so far.

"We welcome the messages from government bodies they are looking to take a stronger stance," he said.

"But we need to perhaps pat a few landholders on the back for their efforts in managing pigs.

"We have very competent shooters and chopper pilots, they work well with the landholders—they just need support.

"What I don't think we need is money being diverted to large monitoring programs, we already have a mature monitoring program set up."

Recalling the Leader boys

By Longreach Archival And Historical Research Group

Do you remember the Leader Boys?

Even though The Longreach Leader commenced publication in 1923, it is believed Leader boys didn't come into being until some time later.

Both newsagents sold Leaders, but some people obviously preferred theirs to be delivered.

Possibly the oldest living Leader 'boy' has submitted an account of his life as a Leader boy in the 1950s.

He says they were called Leader Boys simply because they delivered Leaders and they were boys!

Leader boys were traditionally in their early teens—not because of any regulations, but because at that time there were only three or four of them and through natural attrition, the positions became available when 'boys' moved onto other things.

He states he obtained his job through a mate whose uncle worked at the Leader office.

He continues, "The boys would turn up at the Leader office in Magpie Lane after school on Fridays, load our bikes as soon as the Leaders were available and set off on our rounds.

"My 'round' was over the railway line, Galah Street.

"There were no street numbers and we had to remember where our customers lived.

"We had set customers.

"We would pull up at the front of the residence and yell 'Lea-der', usually several times.

"The resident would come and collect the paper and pay for it, sixpence (5 cents).

"More often than not, the customers were waiting at the front gate.

"Extra Leaders were always carried as there were always non-regulars wanting a paper.

"We were paid 1½ pence (one cent) for each paper delivered and we had to account for every paper on our return to the Leader office.

"Bikes were fitted with a specially adapted sugar bag, sewn on the open end.

"Back then, sugar came in jute bags or similar material—a 70-pound bag.

"The bag was draped over the bar of the bike and we cut a slit in the bag just below the bar to accommodate the Leaders."

The tradition of Leader boys lasted until the early 1970s.

By then, more people had cars and drove to the newsagents to purchase their much-awaited paper.

In the 1960s, there were nine or ten Leader boys.

The boys were aware of their rights and the following poem illustrates this:

The Two Cent Strike

Now you all remember Custer's last stand, and the shearers in '91, The day the ANZACS made history and the fight with Atilla the Hun, But most of these well-known battles, were all but forgotten the day, The Leader boys of Longreach decided to strike for more pay.

Each Friday 'round about 3.30 when school was done for the week, Some 9 or 10 young lads would go their fortune to seek.

They rode on their well-maintained cycles, with a sugar bag strung 'cross the bar, Collected their issues of the Leader and delivered them near and far.

Each boy had his own special area, and no one dared venture in, To anyone else's territory – it was considered an unforgivable sin.

The Mafia boast strict ethics but these boys made them look slender and you only became a deliverer, by submitting a signed and sealed tender.

It happened back in the mid '60's, there was not much money about,

And these young lads had decided to show THEM who had the clout.

The Leader is our local rag, and not a bad paper at that, But these boys, nah, they refused to touch it because they had declared it 'black'.

Things went along nice and smoothly but rumblings could be heard, They wanted a raise for delivery, so soon they 'put out the word'.

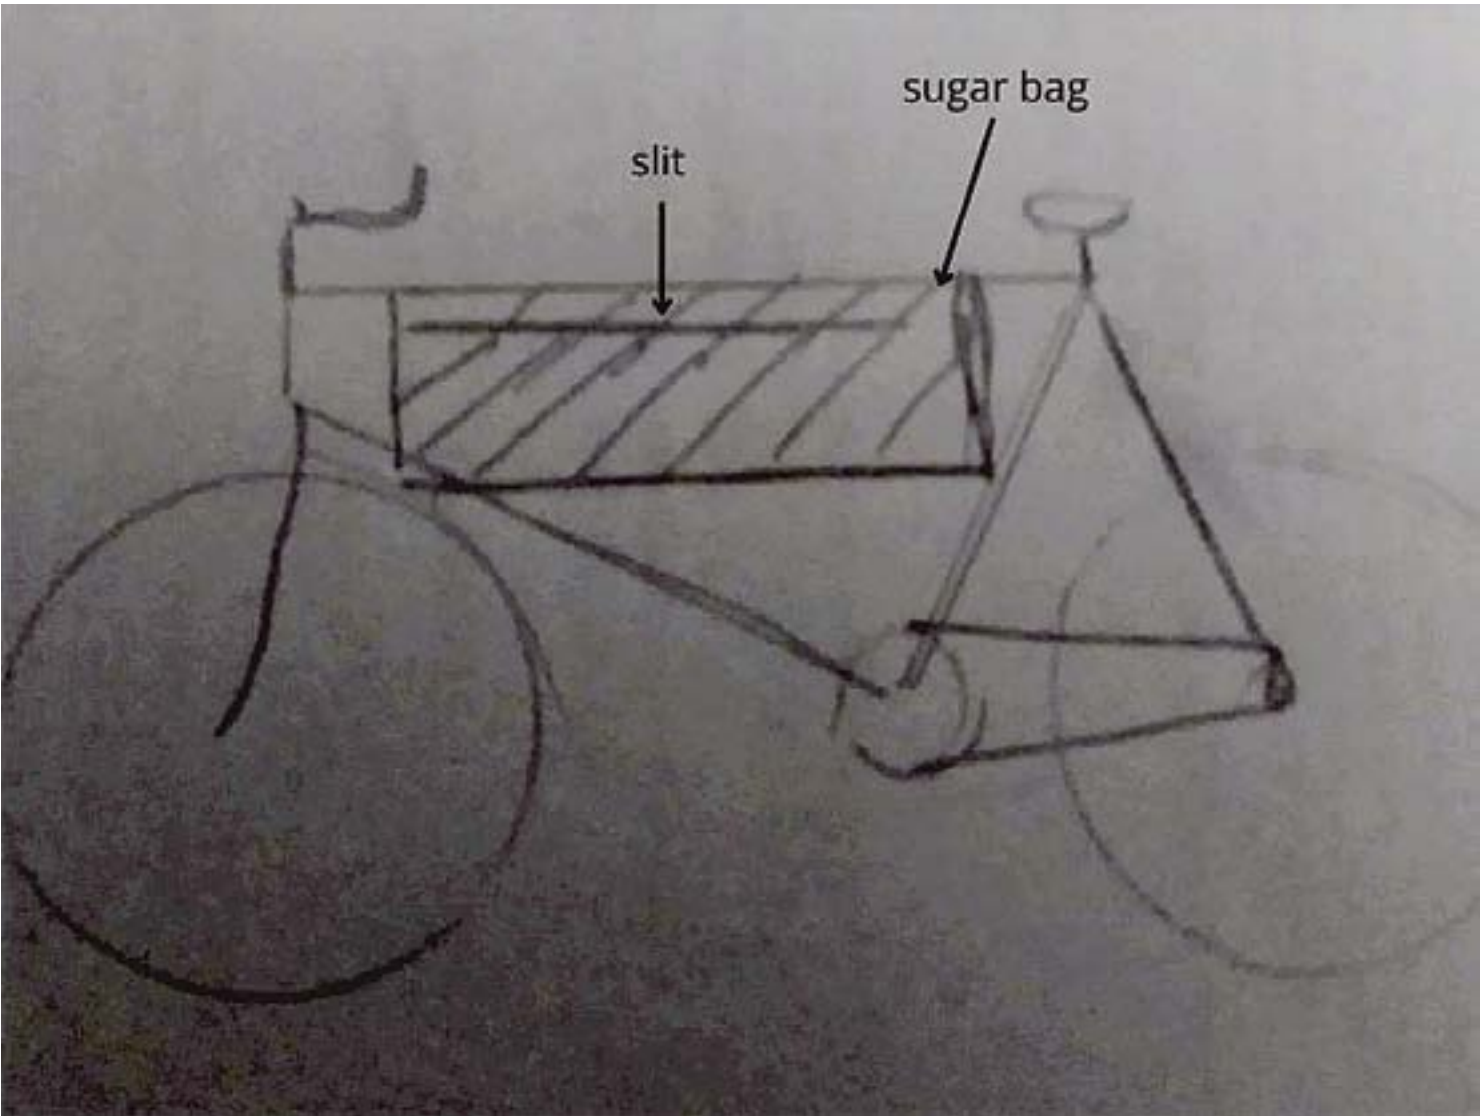

Illustration of a Leader Boy's bike with custom-made bag to hold the Leaders

"Two cents raise is what we are asking, and two cents is what we will get, If not, then no distribution – the Leaders will just have to sit."

Now the head boy was quite short and stocky, went by the name of 'Puss', He decided on confrontation, he'd have a word with the boss.

Now he was no paper tiger in spite of his size and his name, He'd make this crusty old bugger see they were playing no game.

Of course the boss refused Puss's offer, in fact he laughed in his face.

But alas, he didn't know it, the boys had surrounded the place.

"Two cents, two cents or nothing", they shouted and stamped on the ground, And on hearing a loud commotion, a crowd soon gathered around.

The boys made a barricade down Magpie Lane, and not one bike would be shifted, Until this cruel old boss man, his ultimatum had lifted.

They even considered a 'sit in', refused to let the staff go, And even the threat of black-mail, the lousy old man still said 'No'.

By now some quite angry housewives began phoning to check things out, And with this increasing pressure, the boss, he began to have doubt.

"Give in and give them the money, for God's sake end this foul strike, We want our Leaders delivered, do what is good and what's right."

A loud cheer emerged from the office, and we all guessed what it was about, 'We've won, we get two cents a Leader', is what the boys did shout.

So everything went back to normal, and the boys went out on the scout, But well we remember the marvellous day when Puss called all the boys out.

Storyfest testimonies from students

“I am thrilled to be able to participate in such and amazing activity here in the outback. Being able to talk to authors and hear what they have to teach us will be an awesome opportunity and I cannot wait for it to start! I am most looking forward to working as a protocol student alongside my fellow peers to help out our chosen author throughout the day. Listening to their sessions and helping them out will be a great way to learn about being an author and some of the tips and tricks of being a great writer/illustrator. I cannot wait for Storyfest Out West!”

JACY, Year 10

“I am really excited for Storyfest Out West because there is an opportunity to learn about all these different styles on how to write a book and make our own books even better. It is also a great chance for us to explore our creative side and learn just how amazing stories really are and what they mean to us. I am looking forward to meeting all the authors and learning their methods to writing a story to see if it can help me to become a better writer.”

TYLER, Year 8

“I really can't wait for Storyfest Out West. I can't wait to meet the authors and have an amazing experience with my friends.”

AIDEN, Year 6

“I am 10/10 excited and I can't wait for the fun to start. I am looking forward to viewing the author sessions as you get to hear how their journey to becoming a writer started.”

LUCY, Year 8

Reunited: Daniel MacPherson, right, was welcomed back to Ramsay Street by former on-screen best friend Toadie (Ryan Moloney); far right, MacPherson back in the day with co-stars Krista Vendy, Dan Paris and Holly Valance.

The end of an era

Memorable residents from Neighbours' 37-year history are returning as the iconic soap says goodbye. Daniel MacPherson, who played sporty heartthrob Joel Samuels until 2002, chats to Siobhan Duck about the show that kickstarted his career

AT the peak of his Neighbours fame, Daniel MacPherson had some fans in very high places. And in addition to the thousands of teenage girls who had his posters adorning their bedroom walls, MacPherson laughs that Formula One driver Lewis Hamilton, the Archbishop of Canterbury and even Prince William had revealed to him that they were also fans of his Ramsay Street alter-ego.

MacPherson played the role of triathlete Joel Samuels from 1998 to 2002 and together with his contemporaries – Holly Valance, Brooke Satchwell, Jesse Spencer and Madeleine West – helped to bring some youthful energy and sex appeal back to Erinsborough.

The role was written specifically for MacPherson at the urging of Neighbours' casting director Jan Russ who had been wowed by an audition for another character.

A legend of the industry, Russ is credited with discovering Kylie Minogue, Jason Donovan, Guy

Pearce, Delta Goodrem, Natalie Imbruglia and Valance during her tenure on the show. As such, getting the seal of approval from Russ was a sign that MacPherson was destined for big things.

And she was right. It didn't take long for the handsome young actor to go from unknown Cronulla teenager to household name, winning the most popular new talent Logie within his first year.

"It was amazing," he reflects of becoming an overnight heartthrob and of the hysteria surrounding the show's young cast at the time.

"Brooke Satchwell, Jesse Spencer, Jacinta [Stapleton] and Ryan [Moloney], we were all babies.

"We had a lot of fun. Pre-social media, it was a time when you did shopping centre appearances on the weekend, hundreds of fans, all screaming, it was chaos, but so much fun."

It was partly as thanks to the fans – and also as a mark of respect to the people who gave him his break on the soap 24 years ago – that MacPherson jumped at the chance to return for the finale.

The actor who is currently starring in the Apple TV+ sci-fi series Foundation, was just one of the stellar line-up of stars who reprised their roles in the lead up to the final episode.

Every era of the show's 37-year run has been represented; from the 1980s hey days – Peter O'Brien, who played bad boy Shane Ramsay when the show debuted on Channel 7, Hollywood hunk Pearce and Mark Little, who starred as the iconic Joe Mangel – through to the stars who made their mark in later years such as Natalie Bassingthwaite, Olympia Valance and Jodi Gordon.

Some of those who couldn't be there in person filmed cameos via Zoom or sent their well wishes. Margot Robbie, who was tied up filming the Barbie movie, sent the cast and crew 37 bottles of champagne on the last day of filming in thanks for launching her career.

And, of course, it wouldn't have been a proper send-off without the show's super couple, Minogue and Donovan, who returned to the Nunawading cul-de-sac to secretly shoot scenes as their iconic characters Scott and Charlene.

MacPherson says there's a very good reason so many of Neighbours' biggest and brightest celebrities travelled from across the world to film scenes.

"Neighbours to me, in a professional sense, was my training ground," he explains.

"I never acted before Neighbours. It taught me about professionalism, punctuality, preparation and even today, even scenes, pages of dialogue, there is a pace and a discipline to this show that serves you so well elsewhere.

"On a personal level, Neighbours was kind of like my university. Living with my mates in St Kilda, working with this great bunch of people and I will be forever grateful. It has been very special to come back."

While back in the day MacPherson's character wasn't averse to getting his gear off to showcase his impressive physique, the former Dancing with the Stars host emphasises that those days are well and truly over.

"I can tell you what you won't get – no nipple piercing, no speedos, no blonde frizzy mullet hair, no Full Monty, thank goodness! – but some friendships rekindled which is terrific and a lot of fun," he laughs.

Even though his hair and wardrobe were a little different to the first time around, finding himself once again working with Stapleton, Moloney, Alan Fletcher (Karl) and Jackie Woodburne (Susan) had given him a strange feeling of déjà vu.

"It is the biggest head spin coming back here [to Neighbours]," he enthuses.

"I haven't been on the Neighbours set for 20-something years, even the drive out here my mind was blowing. To come and see all the faces again, all my friends, to get back on the sets, it was one of the most enjoyable times of my life. I was 18 when I started here, left when I was 21 so to come back again, my head is spinning."

During his four-year stint on Ramsay Street, MacPherson had his fair share of dramatic storylines and screen romances but says it's the comedic stories that he loved best.

"My favourite storyline in hindsight is different from the ones I enjoyed filming the most," he says.

"I loved the ridiculousness that Joel, Lance and Toadie got up to – the House of Trouser. There is a period when Lance went on an alien thing, and we stopped cleaning the house. The Full Monty was really funny, and Toadie and I performing 'Mary Had a Little Lamb' in tutus also stands out!"

The renewed nostalgia and affection for the series that has come in the lead-up to the finale will hopefully open doors for some of Ramsay Street's longest-serving residents who now find themselves without work for the first time in decades.

"I'm excited for Ryan to see what opportunities open up to him," he says.

"They were great years and I really wanted to honour the show and the cast and crew that taught me so much. Some of first scenes were with Jackie and Fletch, and I wanted to come back to say thanks [to them] and also to thank the fans."

■ Neighbours bows out with a movie-length finale Thursday July 28, 7.30pm, 10 and 10 Peach, and streaming, 10 Play

PICK OF THE WEEK

All in: Mark Wahlberg, Rose Byrne, Gustavo Escobar, Isabela Merced and Juliana Gamiz in Instant Family.

FAST-TRACK TO FAMILY LIFE

Saturday
INSTANT FAMILY
Nine, 7.30pm, PG (2018)

When middle-class American couple Pete and Ellie Wagner (Mark Wahlberg and Rose Byrne) look at their lives, something is missing – as their thoughtless relatives constantly remind the childless couple. At an event for potential foster parent-child connections, the Wagners meet Hispanic-American siblings 15-year-old Lizzy (Isabela Merced), 10-year-old Juan (Gustavo Escobar) and 6-year-old Lita (Juliana Gamiz) and jump in the deep end. What happens next is a roller-coaster ride of fast-tracked familial relationships with a very steep learning curve. Based on director Sean Anders' real-life experiences, Instant Family is a faithful, if simplified, representation of the rewards, dangers and challenges in foster care. ★★★★★

PRESUMED INNOCENT
7Flix, Friday, 8.40pm, M (1990)

The best films of director Alan J. Pakula (All the President's Men, The Pelican Brief) tend to deal with fear and paranoia, and those are the operative emotions in this engrossing adult drama that relies on complex characterisations and plotting. Harrison Ford plays Rusty Sabich, a man accused of murder who is fighting it out in the courtroom. He works brilliantly, as does the rest of the cast, particularly Bonnie Bedelia (pictured with Ford) as Sabich's wife Barbara. ★★★★★

THE MUMMY
9Go!, Saturday, 7.30pm, M (2017)

Inevitable comparisons will be made with the 2009 hit movie's winning mixture of romance, action, adventure and horror, but even Tom Cruise can't save this 2017 reboot from its oddly dull stupor. Intended as the first of a series of movies, it kicks off with a US soldier named Nick Morton (Cruise) joining forces with an archaeologist (Annabelle Wallis, pictured) to stop the malevolent mummy of an ancient Egyptian princess (Sofia Boutella), who he accidentally awakens. ★★★★★

HARRY POTTER AND THE GOBLET OF FIRE
7Flix, Sunday, 7pm, PG (2005)

The fourth film in the Harry Potter series is a splendid fantasy spectacular that introduces more of the wider wizarding world. It begins with Harry (Daniel Radcliffe) competing in the inter-school Triwizard Competition. Rumbling ominously in the background is news of Harry's nemesis, Lord Voldemort (Ralph Fiennes, pictured). It's much scarier than the previous Potter films, while Harry's growing awareness of his family history is powerfully depicted. ★★★★★

EDGE OF TOMORROW
10 Shake, Monday, 8.30pm, M (2014)

The Bourne Identity director Doug Liman delivers a fast-paced popcorn sci-fi flick that might've failed in less experienced hands. It sees Tom Cruise (pictured) as Major William Cage, who finds himself out of his depth when he is deployed in a battle with aliens that are taking over Earth. In a Groundhog Day-esque scenario, he is quickly and violently killed, but finds himself waking up again and again on the same day, allowing him to gradually build up an arsenal of skills. ★★★★★

BLADE
9Go!, Monday, 8.30pm, MA15+ (1998)

Modern comic-book hero Blade steps out of the pages of Marvel and into the shoes of Wesley Snipes (pictured). Blade, a hybrid vampire-human, is determined to exterminate all vampires on the face of the Earth, especially his nemesis, a megalomaniac (Stephen Dorff) hell-bent on world domination and turning all humans into sushi. This cyberpunk thriller seems designed to appeal to everybody – comic collectors, hardcore gore freaks, action fans and conspiracy theorists. Messy fun. ★★★★★

BLACK BOOK
SBS World Movies, Tuesday, 9.30pm, MA15+ (2006)

Director Paul Verhoeven (Basic Instinct) does nothing to quell his notorious lack of subtlety with this bodice-ripping World War II thriller. Jewish woman Rachel Stein (Carice van Houten, pictured with Thom Hoffman) infiltrates enemy quarters and falls for a high-ranking Gestapo officer (Sebastian Koch) while seeking to avenge the murder of her family. Tangled in a web of intrigue, treachery and betrayal, the seductive spy struggles to distinguish between friend and foe as she seeks justice. ★★★★★

The Guide

WILDLIFE RESCUE AUSTRALIA 10, Saturday, 6.30pm

You never know what to expect in this heartwarming series. Featuring Dr Bree Talbot (pictured) and her trusty mobile vet hospital, the bubbly medico travels around the beautiful surrounds of Byron Bay and beyond to rescue native wildlife. Not only is it a celebration of nature and its diverse and colourful inhabitants, it's an educational adventure into all the scrapes that creatures can get caught up in. This week, Willow the owlet-nightjar needs a gentle check-up after falling out of its nest. Bree and the team are also concerned about the gas in Sandy the eastern grey kangaroo joey's stomach. Tune in for an up-close look at some of Australia's cutest creatures.

HARRY POTTER: HOGWARTS TOURNAMENT OF HOUSES 7Flix, Sunday, 6pm

The timing of this screening is a little behind, but Harry Potter fans won't mind. If they haven't already watched this four-part series on repeat – which concludes tonight – they're in for a treat. Celebrating the 20th anniversary of the movies, fans of the franchise compete to answer trivia questions about the meticulously detailed world. Dame Helen Mirren (pictured) hosts the entertaining spectacle in her first role as a quiz host. The Oscar winner plays her part with aplomb, admitting this role “was a great way to be able to participate in the whole extraordinary phenomena that is Harry Potter.”

JUST FOR LAUGHS AUSTRALIA 10, Monday, 9.30pm

Stand-up comedy is a rarity on free-to-air and shows that celebrate Australian comedians are even more few and far between. So it's with a rambunctious round of applause that this local series returns for its eighth season tonight.

This year, the live recording of the show moved from the Sydney Opera House to Melbourne's Malthouse Theatre, giving rise to some extra excitement from the crowd. The much-loved Judith Lucy (pictured) kicks off the laughs along with Logie Award-winner and Celebrity MasterChef standout Dilruk Jayasinha and storytelling songstress Michelle Brasier.

PICK OF THE WEEK

THE ABC OF ABC TV, Tuesday, 8pm

David Wenham wraps up his stellar turn as interviewer in this enlightening series in which he chats with well-known Australian figures as they take a trip down memory lane, propelled by the riches of the ABC archives. Wenham concludes with a flourish tonight as he sits for a relaxed conversation with former prime minister John Howard. The surprising and nostalgic look back includes footage of Howard campaigning for MP Tom Hughes in Sydney's Campsie during the 1966 Federal Election, and his first day in parliament in 1974. In the forthcoming chat, Howard reflects on the ups and downs of his political career, from Port Arthur, to tax and his cherished morning walk.

History repeating:
Former PM John Howard takes a walk down memory lane for The ABC Of.

BREAKING NEWS

PAPER GIRLS
Streaming, from Friday,
Prime Video

Finished bingeing the final season of Stranger Things on Netflix and wondering where your next hit of sci-fi, horror and 1980s nostalgia is coming from?

This bold, spirited and diverse teen drama might be the ticket. It's based on the 2015 comic book series, written by Brian K. Vaughan (Y: The Last Man, Runaways) and illustrated by Cliff Chiang, that follows the adventures of four trailblazing paper girls from Cleveland, Ohio.

In the early hours of the morning after Halloween 1988, Erin (Riley Lai Nelet), Mac (Sofia Rosinsky), Tiffany (Camryn Jones) and KJ (Fina Strazza) are on their regular delivery route when they find themselves caught in the crossfire between warring time travellers.

Transported into the "future" (2019), the 12-year-olds each come face-to-face with the grown-up versions of themselves – comedian Ali Wong is a standout as Erin's anxiety-ridden adult self – as they attempt to return home.

With a militant faction of time travellers on their heels, the girls must embark on a personal journey to overcome their differences – and reconcile with the fact that their 40-something lives are not quite what they had in mind – if they are going to survive.

A coming-of-age story with a killer soundtrack and four fantastic female leads, Paper Girls definitely delivers. – Lauren Mitchell

THE RESORT
Streaming, from Friday, Stan

The Good Place's William Jackson Harper (pictured) and Made for Love's Cristin Milloti team up for this genre-bending new series that bridges the gap between comedy and thriller. On their 10th anniversary trip to the Mayan Riviera, Noah and Emma (Harper and Milloti) uncover an unsolved mystery from 15 years earlier and find themselves pulled into solving it.

SURFACE
Streaming, from Friday, Apple TV+

Left with memory loss from a head injury sustained when falling from a boat, Sophie (Gugu Mbatha-Raw, pictured with Oliver Jackson-Cohen) embarks on a mission to find out what happened. As she pieces her seemingly perfect life back together, she comes to question everything she's being told about herself, her accident and those around her.

COUPLES THERAPY AUSTRALIA
Streaming, Paramount+

Based on the hit US series, this blisteringly honest docuseries goes inside clinical psychologist Marryam Chehel Nabi's weekly sessions with three real and very brave Australian couples, including Doug and Cat (pictured). Their respective roads to recovering and rebuilding their relationships are laid bare over six episodes unlike anything ever made for Aussie TV before.

THE CURSE
Streaming, BritBox

Completely underqualified to pull off one of the biggest gold heists in history, a group of small-time London crooks get more than they bargain for in this practically perfect comedy series. The '80s-set action kicks off when Sidney (Steve Stamp) convinces his mates (Allan Mustafa, Hugo Chedwin and Tom Davis) to nick £50k worth of gold bars from his work.

PRETTY LITTLE LIARS: ORIGINAL SIN
Streaming, Foxtel On Demand

This fresh take on the popular teen melodrama franchise harks back 20 years to the town of Millwood, where a group of girls are being tormented by an unknown assailant known only as "A". Stars Bailee Madison, Chandler Kinney, Malia Pyles and Maia Reficco.

Gardening

Neil Fisher

Araucaria bidwillii or Bunya Pine.

An unconventional beauty

Over the last few weeks, I have had numerous enquiries about a unique large orange-flowering tree.

The tree is the Colvillea racemosa or Colville's Glory.

A couple of years ago I photographed a mass of Lorikeets feeding on the nectar of this most unusual flowering tree.

The Colvillea racemosa was growing in a garden in Aramac.

This is a rare tree with Poinciana-like foliage and orange flowers that hang like bunches of grapes.

A native to Madagascar, Colvillea is a tall deciduous tree that can grow up to 15m high in well-drained composted soils.

The Colvillea blooms very well around Central Queensland and is worth a try if you want something different.

Big weekend for tree planters

Central Queenslanders are being asked to polish up their green thumbs, as Sunday, 31 July is National Tree Day, and it provides one of the best family outings of the year.

Over the last 26 years, more than 5 million volunteers have planted over 26 million native trees and shrubs in projects across Australia.

These are the official Central Queensland National Tree Day sites from the Planet Ark's website, Tuesday 26, however, I believe there are probably many other sites that haven't registered.

- 8am to 11am - Emerald - 100 Capricorn Highway, Emerald.
- 9am to 11am - Bundaberg - 24 Walla Street, South Bundaberg.
- 9am to 11am - Ward - 818 Adavale Road, Ward.
- 9am to 11.30am - Capricorn Coast - Mulambin Road, Rosslyn.
- 9am to 12pm - Gladstone - Cashin Park, Oaks Rd, Tannum Sands.

Postponed - Rockhampton - Yeppen Lagoon, Blackall Street, Rockhampton.

NB.

I would recommend bringing a hat, gloves, sunscreen, and a pick and shovel to any of these events.

National tree day planting hints

1. When planting trees in open areas, it is always important to dig a hole at least twice the size and twice the width of the pot from which the plant has been removed.

A soil mixture containing at least 50 per cent vegetable matter, a moisture retention agent, and a well-drained sandy loam is best to go around the young plant.

I would always recommend using a combination of a slow-release fertiliser, such as Osmocote, in conjunction with an organic low-phosphorous granulated fertiliser such as Blood and Bone.

2. When planting young tree seedlings in exposed positions, placing a clear plastic tree tube, commercially known as Grow Tube, will help protect the young plant from wind and leaf-eating animals.

It will also gather condensation on the inside to help increase the moisture around the base of the plant, and are usually best supported by placing three or four tomato stakes around the inside circumference of the tree tube.

3. When planting large quantities of tree seedlings in exposed conditions where a regular supply of water is not available, it is well worth considering recycling your old two-litre milk and soft-drink containers, as these will allow the tree seedling to acquire sufficient water to sustain plant growth for a period of up to seven days.

What is required is for a heated needle to be spiked through the lid of the container to allow the water to drip slowly through it, and then place it, lid down, as close as possible to the seedling, and preferably slightly buried in the ground.

In some circumstances, a small stake and ties may be required to support the container.

Did you know

The Wollemi Pine or Wollemia nobilis would be one of the most astonishing plant discoveries of the last century.

It was discovered in 1994 by Royal Sydney Botanical Gardens botanist, David Noble growing in one deep ravine in Wollemi National Park near Sydney.

There are only 40 trees in the wild and they have the lowest known genetic variability of any plant species.

The Wollemi Pine has a heritage of over 100 million years and a unique appearance with distinct nobbly bark that is said to look like the trunk is covered in Coco Pops.

123 years ago, the Salvation Army founder, General William Booth planted a series of Bunya Pines in Ipswich, which are still living, and are now officially listed for their historic significance to the area.

Araucaria bidwillii or Bunya Pine is a large tree that can reach a height of 40 metres.

It is native to rainforest scrubs but is also found from mountain tops to ravines.

These are produced high in the dense, rounded crowns of the trees.

Bunya Pine has been widely used around the world as an ornamental tree as it will grow in almost every tropical situation, with the exception of swampy conditions.

Can you identify these plants?

- Can you match the names to the plants?
- Sticky Florestina – Invasive Plant, Emerging Pests (GBO)
 - Bunny Ears - Restricted Invasive Plant (Cat 2,3,4 & 5)
 - Coral Cactus – Restricted Invasive Plant (Cat 3)
 - Rubber Vine - Restricted Invasive Plant (Cat 3)
 - Mother of Millions - Restricted Invasive Plant (Cat 3)
 - Leucaena – Invasive Plant, Emerging Pests (GBO)

Remember no matter if you are a Landholder, Resident, Rate Payer, Renter, Contractor or Traveller, everyone has a General Biosecurity Obligation (GBO) to take all reasonable and practical steps to minimise the risks associated with invasive plants.

Invasive plants should never be placed onto Town Commons, Stock Routes, or other people's properties, vacant land or environmental areas; nor should they be dumped at a refuse dump.

Central Western Queensland has the right temperate Zone for all invasive plants to grow exponentially.

If you believe that you may have an invasive plant growing in your yard or are unsure of what you have got or seen, contact your Local Council and speak to your Rural Lands Officer.

Basin group seeks action

By Western Rivers Alliance

The Lake Eyre Basin (Qld) Stakeholder Advisory Group met for the final time in mid-July to discuss the future of Queensland's Channel Country rivers and floodplains.

The Stakeholder Advisory Group was formed to ensure the protection of Queensland's Lake Eyre Basin rivers and floodplains and includes representatives from the Lake Eyre Basin Traditional Owner Alliance, industry bodies, environment groups, local government, scientific experts and government departments.

Riley Rocco, spokesperson for the Western Rivers Alliance, said it was time for the Palaszczuk government to deliver on its seven-year election commitment to protect the rivers and floodplains as stakeholder consultation comes to an end.

"Now that the Stakeholder Advisory Group is closing, the Palaszczuk government must get on with the job of protecting the Channel Country rivers and floodplains," he said.

"Any further delays only put the Channel Country rivers and floodplains at real risk - as we saw late last year with the granting of Origin Energy's 11 production permits for unconventional gas across 250,000 hectares of globally important floodplains.

George Gorringer, Mithaka Traditional Owner and founding member of the Lake Eyre Basin Traditional Owner Alliance, said he had been fighting to protect the Channel Country rivers and floodplains for decades and that right now was a key opportunity to make sure they're protected for future generations.

"Back in the '90s we fought to save the Cooper from cotton irrigation, now we need to protect the rivers and floodplains from oil and gas," he said.

"I've seen the damage a single road can do to our country—cutting off water flows and choking the floodplains.

"Opening the rivers and floodplains to unconventional oil and gas fields would be devastating for our country and our people.

"These rivers are more than just a resource for making money.

"They are as significant to this country as its birds and animals—our stories all depend on the rivers.

"Just recently Mithaka Traditional Owners have been overseas presenting ground-breaking archaeological research from our country.

"The Channel Country is on the world stage, so our history and culture are on the line here.

"The Queensland Government should be supporting jobs and business opportunities for Traditional Owners to be out looking after our country, not destroying it."

IN BRIEF

Safety first an essential lesson

As a part of National Farm Safety Week, The Queensland Family and Child Commission are making it their responsibility to inform children about farm safety, after forty-six children and young people in Queensland have drowned in rural dams or died in quad bike and side-by-side vehicle accidents since 2004.

QFCC Principal Commissioner Luke Twyford said the community needed to remain vigilant of the safety risks to children and young people on farms and rural properties.

"While rural properties can be adventurous places for children and young people to live and visit, sadly, our child death data suggests there can be fatal risks in these settings," he said.

"Rural water hazards, including dams and troughs, are often not considered risks when they are located away from a family home; however, our child death data indicates otherwise, with 26 children younger than five have drowned in rural water hazards since 2004.

"While active child supervision is key to preventing drownings, it can't be provided 24/7, which is why fenced play areas are critical in rural areas, along with early water education about 'no-go areas'."

Australian and Indonesian joint response

The Australian livestock industry will work with Indonesian feedlots to help protect their facilities from disease incursions and subsequent trade disruption via a biosecurity support project jointly funded by the Australian Government and Meat & Livestock Australia (MLA).

The Australian Government recently committed an initial $500,000 grant to Meat & Livestock Australia (MLA).

As part of this investment, MLA will be responsible for coordinating support from Australian industry for the Indonesian feedlot sector's emergency response to Foot and Mouth Disease (FMD) and Lumpy Skin Disease (LSD).

MLA Managing Director, Jason Strong, said while FMD had been a threat to the industry for over 100 years, its recent detection in Bali reinforces how vigilant we must be.

"The risk of a potential disease entering Australia is always at the forefront of our industry priorities and that is why we have some of the strictest biosecurity protocols in the world, and well-rehearsed plans to deal with them," Mr Strong said.

"Alongside stronger biosecurity measures at the border from the Federal Government, MLA will coordinate on-the-ground support to help our Indonesian counterparts to counteract this threat.

"This will be done through vaccination and livestock identification and traceability guidelines, as well as training and communication plans.

"In addition, we will support enhanced data collection and reporting systems within Indonesia."

The National Farmers' Federation has welcomed a decision by Secretary of the Department of Agriculture, Fisheries and Forestry, Andrew Metcalfe AO, in his capacity as The Director of Biosecurity to establish Biosecurity Response Zones at international airports.

Enacted under section 365 of the Biosecurity Act 2015, these zones will improve the powers of biosecurity officers to direct passengers to use foot mats and other biosecurity control measures such as the cleaning of shoes when traveling through International airports.

"Farmers do not want any stone left unturned when it comes to stopping FMD or any other threats from reaching our shores," NFF President Fiona Simson said.

"We again urge all returning travelers to comply with Australia's biosecurity rules and to follow the direction of our hardworking frontline biosecurity officers."

Best west athletes

By Michael R Williams

Children from across the central west competed on 26 July at the Longreach State High School oval to find out who had the chops to go on to represent the district.

Convenor Lars Hansen said this was an annual event which creates a competition pathway for students aged 10 years and older.

“This allows a pathway to the upcoming sunset carnival, and as part of that, our students who compete and are selected will represent the central west athletics team,” he said.

“They will then be eligible to compete at the northwest carnival, and finally, to compete in Brisbane.

“We have students driving in from Alpha, Jericho, and Isisford coming here to compete—it’s a big drive for them.”

Mr Hansen said students have been putting a lot of effort to compete in athletics, a lot of whom are eager to compete at a state or national level.

“Some students just really love the carnival, they get to see friends and family they may not be able to see often,” he said.

“We do get a lot of parents and spectators coming in to support the schools.

“Everyone had put in their best, there is no doubt about that.”

Auskick returns with a bang in Longreach

By Michael Lloyd

Auskick/AFL kicked back into gear this week in Longreach.

With more than 20 kids taking part, coordinator Michael Lloyd was pleased with the turnout.

“In a non-traditional sport for this area, it is great to see so many kids taking part,” he said.

AFL teaches kids some great ball skills, how to kick a long ball, and good team dynamics.

After running for a few years now, Auskick in Longreach has found itself with some graduates, like Alex Lloyd.

Alex was keen to play a game of AFL, so he and his dad have travelled to Rockhampton a few times to play with the Kangaroos Club there.

This has resulted in the Longreach Club forming a partnership for those kids who are too old for Auskick to now start preparing for the next level.

Dan Prosser showing Chanusha Kariyawasam correct kicking techniques.

So it is not too late to register, go to the Longreach AFL Supporters Facebook page to register for Auskick, or email longreachafl@gmail.com if your child would like to participate in the older group.

“If the solo deal isn’t for you, we have the mixed and doubles tournament coming up.”

If you’d like to enter please email tennislongreach@gmail.com, and there is a $20 nomination cost.

“Tennis is a fun sport, and it’s easy to learn if you come with an open mind,” Mr Galea said.

“Come make some new friends.”

The Longreach Tennis Club cordially invites you to their upcoming tournaments.

Ladies show the way in mixed pairs game

Last Sunday we had another competition game as well as four social games.

With so many of our bowlers away at various competitions, it was good to see the travelers still coming along for social games.

The competition game was a mixed pairs game with Bluey Beard and Leigh Reeve up against Wendy Hunt and Darcy Browne.

It was fair to say the ladies carried their more experienced male teammates which meant there was a fair bit of head shaking going on.

The ladies were driving kity’s into the ditch, drawing touchers and were holding the ultimate shots more often than not.

These mixed pairs games are played over 21 ends and after five ends the score was 6–4 to Wendy and Darcy.

Unfortunately, Leigh and Bluey got stuck on four shots for the next five ends and ended up trailing 14–4.

To their credit, they fought their way back to be within one shot at 14–13, but then Wendy found her form again and the margin stretched out to 17–14 with four ends to play.

Bluey and Leigh tried hard but couldn’t get back the momentum and Wendy and Darcy ended up taking the win by 23–14.

In social triples we had Pete, Cisco, and Sharon beat John, Bernie, and Amanda by 22–12.

We also had Colin, Coral, and Ellen lose to John H., Peter K, and Baileigh by 17–15 in a close game.

On the rink next door we had Ray and Ian beaten by Wayne and Bob by 18–15, and in the last game we welcomed back Gerard Comerford who teamed with Tony to defeat Shawn and Terry by 23–9.

This weekend we have the final of the Ladies Championship Triples with Michelle McKewen, Cerise Woodfield, and Baileigh taking on Paula Brun, Dorrie Delaney and Selina Hayward. I also need to remind people that on the 20th and 21st of August the club is holding it’s annual David Crust Memorial weekend with a barefoot bowls day on Saturday and the Competition games for the David Crust Memorial Shield being run on Sunday.

All proceeds go to the fantastic Royal Flying Doctor Service.

More info to come on those events.

State of Origin: It’s the game that stops two states

QUEENSLANDER!!!

If you are like me you are still celebrating. What a Game 3, what a series!!!

Every Rugby League supporter watches Origin, along with 99 per cent of all sports lovers.

Those people drag along family, friends and the family dog.

It is the game that stops two states.

But on the day after Game 3, I was talking to a musically inclined lady (not Mrs Lloyd), and she said she never misses a game.

This is a lady I rarely talk to about sport.

Her reasoning was, “but it’s the State of Origin!”, which got me thinking about which games/competitions/tournaments dragged in non-traditional watches.

You would normally think of Australian matches, the Olympics, or World Cups, but it is not always the case.

With Rugby League its Origin.

Most fans, let alone the general public, could not tell you when Australia last played and again who.

Cricket is the Ashes or the Boxing Day Test.

Tennis is Wimbledon, the white, the grass, the prestige.

Swimming is the Olympics or Com Games.

Sometimes I think we like the Com Games more because of the big medal hauls.

Soccer is the World Cup qualifiers.

We are generally so exhausted after the stress of qualifying, that we tend to forget the actual Cup!

Athletics is the Olympics, where every four years we all become walking or discuss experts.

Ruby Union is the Australian matches.

I use to follow the Super 14/16/Pacifica, but when we could benot at a Kiwi side for a couple of years, I started to lose interest.

BTW(by the way), how good has Ireland been!

Hockey is the Olympics.

AFL is Grand Final day.

Even when they had a State of Origin, local Club footy was always bigger.

Golf, is it the British Open or the Masters at Augusta?

‘Bit biased with Cam Smith winning recently, let us say British Open.

Everyone will have their own opinion, some might even say the local inter-town game is the biggest event of the year.

But what I have seen in the sport over the years is the upsurge in participants after the above events and an even bigger increase when an Australian team or individual is doing well.

Ash Barty’s form on and off the court proved a big increase in tennis players across the nation, and I bet there are plenty of young, and old, golfers out there dusting off their clubs and trying to find that elusive glove.

There is just enough time to take a breath and get ready for the Commonwealth games, GO AUSTRALIA!!!

Team photo of the Longreach/Illfracombe Tigers.

The Tigers' territory

How proud are you of your team's efforts this year in making the finals?
Obviously very happy with the side heading into the finals on top of the ladder, but as we tell our boys we haven't won anything yet.

We cannot allow ourselves to get this deep into the season and become complacent.

What were some of the accomplishments your team have made this year on and off of the field?
I think from a club point of view we have made more steps to be involved with our community.

It is important the side becomes about more than just the 20 blokes that take the field each and we represent the community as well.

Volunteering our time throughout the year at a number of events as well through our Old Boys Day and Ladies day we are making progress in that direction.

What were some of the challenges the team has faced? injuries etc.
Our biggest challenge was probably replacing a number of guys who had a big influence on our 2021 Premiership season, as well as losing our first-choice fullback a week before the season started.

We had to shuffle a few players around into positions that were probably not their preferred but, full credit, every time we have asked someone to step up they have done so.

We also faced two tough road trips back to back to Winton and then Blackall and came up short in how we wanted to perform.

How proud are you of your team's efforts this year in making the finals?
Very proud we were a chance to be minor premiers.

It's been a difficult year through the lack of player numbers.

What were some of the accomplishments your team have made this year on and off of the field?
We had a crisis meeting before we committed for the season, we did not want to start and then have to withdraw.

We are an older side with no young players throughout our region to play so we are real pleased to be in with a chance for a home grand final.

What were some of the challenges the team has faced? injuries etc.
We are no different from other teams.

We go through injuries and unavailability through work.

How has the team changed since last year? What has surprised you about the new team?
We are lucky some players from outside Blackall have chosen to play with the Magpies for the year.

Some from Tambo, Longreach, and Torrens Creek as well.

We have the same player base as previous years, but it is week to week with only six to 10 players at week day training.

Our coaches have done a marvellous job.

Who have been some of the stand-out

But those two games were probably the kickstart we needed.

How has the team changed since last year? What has surprised you about the new team?
This year we have been lucky enough to introduce some youth into our side in Rhett Harris and Tom Harris Monaghan, both boys are still in grade 12 yet they have become important members of our side; we also have a number of young guys that train with us each week who are not yet old enough to play A Grade, but it is a good feeling to be at training and know that there are blokes coming through that want to be part of the A Grade squad in years to come.

Who have been some of the stand-out players? Most improved?
I think we have had strong individual efforts in a number of games this year but a player like Jordan Cameron is probably having his most consistent season for a long time.

There is little difference between the best games and worst games of Sam Munns and Alec Tanks, and they lead the way each week.

Jack Wilson also has been impressive since his move into the halves and all of the younger guys in our squad are probably lucky to have two players of the class of Trent Hoad and Kien Dickson still playing good footy at this stage of their careers.

What are some of the strategies you have going into the finals?
Our strategies have been very simple all year, ball control, communication and defence.

Nothing much changes as we head into finals, if we can nail all three we know it will take a very good side to beat us.

What are some of the teams you're on the lookout for? What are some things that have worked for other teams?
It is an interesting comp this year as each side brings something a little different.

The Brumbies I thought were unlucky in a number of games this year and had a very strong forward pack and a good kicking game from their halves.

Winton is a big side with a good rotation of forwards which means they keep coming at you as well as a hooker that is crafty around the ruck.

Barcaldine brings a smaller side with a lot of youth but is well coached and throws a bit more football at you at speed.

Blackall you always know what you are going to get, they are fit, they play the 80 minutes right out and defensively are a very good side.

I think whatever Barcaldine do this year they will build on heading into season 2023.

Any final words for the fans/ organisers?
I really hope the supporters from all towns get behind their side heading into finals time, Rugby League is one of the last inter-town competitions left in our region, and the quality of football this season has been top-notch.

I think the remaining games will all be tight contests and highly entertaining.

players? Most improved?
Players of note have been Logan Hauff—very consistent, Chris Doyle has been solid, while newcomers Will Burnie and Coen Buckley have played some great footy.

What are some of the strategies you have going into the finals?
We will not change anything, just stick to what is working.

Defence is our cornerstone, with good talking and limiting mistakes.

It's not rocket science: go out and enjoy your time together, it is bush footy.

What are some of the teams you're on the lookout for? What are some things that have worked for other teams?

Longreach has good attack—we'll need to defend them out. Trent Hoad and Adam Hughes are always dangerous.

We remember 2021, it was close, but a great grand final.

Any final words for the fans/ organisers?
Enjoy footy while we still can and thanks to all who have been supporting us throughout the many years.

It is the greatest game of all.

Up the Magpies—see you in Blackall for the grand final.

Devils much improved season

How proud are you of your team's efforts this year in making the finals?
I'm very proud of this team of young men after finishing in last place last season not too many people expected us to be much of a threat this year, but yet here we are finishing the regular season in third place and lining up for a home Minor Semi Final.

What were some of the accomplishments your team have made this year on and off of the field?
The Devils have accomplished many things this year on the field; being able to boast a win against every team this year and off the field such as organising and hosting our Inaugural Ladies Day event a few weeks ago, which was a massive success.

Later on in the year the Devils will be also hosting/catering for the Variety Bash.

What were some of the challenges the team has faced? injuries etc.
We have had our fair share of challenges to overcome this year and have struggled to field the same side week in, week out: be it from Covid, work commitments, injuries to key players, and more recently suspension, but in true Devil spirit the team have kept turning up and playing for the man beside them.

How has the team changed since last year? What has surprised you about the new team?
Not a great deal has really changed personnel-wise from the team last year compared to this year; our biggest change, if I were to put it down to one thing, would be just the combinations between the players.

Everyone is a lot more comfortable in their positions out on the field.

Who have been some of the stand-out players? Most improved?
If I were to pick a couple of standouts in the last few games, one would have to be our fullback Henry Fielder; he only shifted out the back recently due to injury, but he plays with no fear and attacks any loose ball to bring it back with venom.

Another two would have to be two of our big boys up front: Riley Fraser and Kevin Mutton, for laying the platform each week for the team to be able to work off the back of.

What are some of the strategies you have going into the finals?
Our main strategy heading into the finals relates to the age-old saying, "keep it simple stupid".

It will be a matter of who can hold on to the ball the most and play mistake-free football.

What are some of the teams you're on the lookout for? What are some things that have worked for other teams?
We are just taking it one team at a time and not getting ahead of ourselves, so we are not looking past the Sandgoanans this week.

Any final words for the fans/ organisers?
I would like to say a quick shout-out to the Winton Junior League for catering and running the canteen all year.

Also a huge thank you to Pencil Walsh our Treasurer, Teonie Dwyer our Secretary, and to all our other volunteers: whether that be working behind the bar or working the gate or driving the bus and everything in between.

If not for all the hard work that each and every one of you does the Devils do not continue to exist.

Sandgoannas finals bound

How proud are you of your team's efforts this year in making the finals.
I'm proud of all the boys, we've gotten better as the comp went on, and we can only improve with time and effort.
We've played an honest, clean game and been decent competitors.

What were some of the accomplishments your team have made this year on and off the field?

We welcomed nine new players on debut this year, and we also fundraised from our jersey auction money for cystic fibrosis and our club.
We have also commenced building our new clubhouse deck, which is exciting to see.

We also have future events planned for the rest of the year.

What were some of the challenges the team faced? Injuries etc.

Low player numbers and getting everyone to training, however, a snowball effect has occurred late into the season.

How has the team changed since last year? What has surprised you about the new team?

We have been lucky enough to inherit players which have been around a few years.

This has engrained our team with a great football mentality and club spirit.

Last year's coach, Brad Harbottle completed a lot of work with the under 17s, and they have this year slotted into our team well and made a lot of difference. It's been great to see them nurtured from juniors to seniors.

This year we have a good mix of youthful skill and old-school mentality.

Who were some of the stand-out players? Most improved?

Some of the younger players are the most improved, especially with the help of the older players supporting.

Premierships up for grabs

By Rob Luck, Longreach Jockey Club

With one weekend of racing remaining in the central and north-west, the Queensland country racing premierships are on the line.

The trainer's premiership is a dead heat between Tanya Parry from the north-west and Todd Austin from the central west who are both sitting at 54 wins, while the jockey premiership sees Ric McMahon with what appears to be an unassailable lead on 52 wins ahead of Dan Ballard.

Racing this coming weekend is at Tambo in the central west and Corfield in the northwest, so it is quite likely trainers Parry and Austin will have a number of runners at either venue or both to ensure they gain the Queensland Country Trainers Premiership.

The weekend results at Longreach enabled the Austin team to gain a double in the eight-race program when two promising horses from their stable took out their races.

Halcyon House, who has only had one defeat in four runs for the Austin team and five for the stable, has now recorded two wins from two starts on the Longreach track, and jockey Ric McMahon had an armchair ride on the Husson gelding to produce his fourth win and third from five starts for the stable.

Sole Heir continued to show promise with a second, beaten 3.25 lengths with Live and Free running into third.

In the final event of the program, which was the feature race of the day, the Arthur Moody Memorial Open Handicap over 1000 metres, which saw the Austin-trained, excellent sprinter Wall Street Tycoon again provide a comfortable win for jockey McMahon when it was able to dash away in the straight and win by one-and-three-quarter lengths over American Genius and Han Dynasty into third.

Wall Street Tycoon, in the previous season, was a runner in the Country Stampede final and has now won two from three since a spell with a close-up fourth at Rockhampton in one of those runs as well.

These two gallopers give Todd Austin a strong hand in any future sprint races, and it also provided in the win by Halcyon House the second of a double for owner Pam Carolyn who owns Halcyon House in over partnership.

Earlier in the day, Longreach trainer Mark Oates had produced The Landing to win the Benchmark 45 over 1200 metres with jockey Jason Missen.

Having its first run for the Oates stable after being trained by Blackall trainer Charlie Prow, The Landing had only won, previously, once in 28 starts, but provided a comfortable run and was too strong for Strawberry Blonde, who appeared to have the race sewn up halfway down the straight and Hot Chocolate battling on for third.

The Landing, now that it has broken through again, has the potential to go up in distance and score future wins, and owner Pam Carolyn will continue her good run of success with her two winners on the day.

Jockey Ric McMahon scored a treble on the day, helping ensure the Central West Jockey Premiership would be sewn up for this year when he partnered with the very exciting Mishani Operator and trainer Shane Iverson to take out the QTIS prize money in the 4LG West FM QTIS Class 3 over 1000 metres.

The Domesday three-year-old gelding has won all four starts for the stable after two wins at Cunnamulla and last week at Blackall and backing up with 64 kilograms, and even though unable to cross and lead early, he proved too strong for an improved Nicky Boy to win by a length-and-a-third with Another Tosser coming in a promising third after resuming from a short break.

Trainer Iverson is likely to continue to plot a course toward open company with Mishani Operator which has been convincing in all of its wins in the south and central west.

Trainer Mark Oates appeared likely to have a double on the day when he produced Uzerli for the first time for the stable in the Longreach Tyre Centre Maiden Plate, and ridden by Jason Missen, was the favourite at $2.

The galloper kicked clear early into the straight after leading comfortably, but in its first race on the track and for the stable was unable to hold off the fit and inform, Typhoon Talayah for the Patrick O'Toole stable.

Ridden by Brendon Newport, who made the trek out to Longreach from the southeast corner and was rewarded with the win, the galloper found its form and the Husson five-year-old mare produced a race to race double for the stable.

Newport was able to settle off the pace, and whereas Uzerli kicked clear in the straight and appeared to have the win, it started to feel the pinch in the final 500 metres, and Typhoon Talayah was able to run over the top over Uzerli and win by a half-length, with All Sorted in third place.
