What a win!

Darwin-trained thoroughbred Saccharo has come from behind to win the 140th Birdsville Cup.

Dubbed the 'Melbourne Cup of the Outback', the 1600-metre race on a red-dirt track is an annual tradition of the rural Queensland town of Birdsville.

Saturday evening's cup win was a first for Saccharo's Longreach-based jockey Robert Faehr and trainer Phillip Cole, who took home a $42,000 prize purse.

The editor's desk

There is a story in this week's edition which had me thinking about the challenges of being in a tight-knit community.

While more often than not being close to everyone is a benefit.

However, sometimes when you are close to other professionals—and they do the wrong thing, you have a decision to make.

Do you go down with them are take the high road and lose someone?

I won't name the story, but for the people surrounding those involved, now will be a challenging time.

To have much of your hopes and goals pinned on someone and to lose it over stupidity must be tough, and a reminder that our decisions do not just affect ourselves, but the people around us.

Respect at Winton for First Nations

By Michael R Williams & Karen Simmons

NEWS LeaderToday.com.au

After consultations with the town's First Nations committee, the Winton Shire Council will now look to make a number of infrastructure changes to the town, with the inclusion of signage that recognises Indigenous history.

"After consultation with our corporate plan, we put it out there for feedback from the community, but got very little from our Indigenous community," Winton Shire Council Mayor Gavin Baskett said.

"So we decided to do a targeted First Nations survey to get their feedback and that information was in our paper back in June.

"Roughly 56 people were approached and around 30-plus replied."

Mr Baskett said the feedback they received was quite concerning in how the local Indigenous saw the Winton community, how they saw the council engage with Indigenous people and how there was no signage around for recognition and opportunities for them.

"It was important to the council to have as many members of the community feel engaged as possible," Mr Baskett said

"Everybody has their feedback, and it might be good or bad but it was good to hear it.

"So we decided to do the First Nations strategy plan going forward for the next five years to help increase participation and inclusiveness.

"The things that we can achieve is a working group from the seven nations that are part of the traditional owners, as well as those who have been living here for generations."

Council plans to build inclusiveness and can achieve this by recognising the shire's history.

"The group might think that something else is a priority and we need their input and ac-

Ilfracombe gym to ease travel for rehabilitation

By Michael R Williams

A new gym set to be available to Ilfracombe residents by summer, will end commutes for rehabilitation and give locals a new exercise option.

Senior Constable and Ilfracombe Police Station Officer in Charge Paul Jackson said he's been implementing gyms in communities like Ilfracombe as a par to fhis job for a number of years.

"I already had the knowledge to mitigate risks, and when I saw the need here - I know Longreach has Phoenix [Fitness] and other places - but here the commute puts a lot of people out," he said.

There is a real need for exercise equipment in Ilfracombe for young people.

"We don't even - outside of the oval have sporting equipment here," Mr Jackson said.

"I was looking for something to help people get active."

The Longreach Regional Council has come on board with the project, offering in-kind donations of the Ilfracombe Rec Centre and funding air-conditioners.

There were also funds left in the recently resurrected Ilfracombe Sport and Rec Association account; more capital was received from the Community Gambling Fund.

"The hardest part about getting a gym put together is finding the space for it," Mr Jackson said.

"There's a hall at the back [of the Ilfracombe Rec Centre]. "There's a fairly sizeable area there that we can use for the equipment, and then we will be using the hall area to do cross fit."

A number of Ilfracombe residents are forced to travel to Longreach to conduct much-needed physiotherapy, Mr Jackson said he has been in consultation with North West Remote Health on the matter.

Locals may soon be able to book their appointments to be had in their own town.

"There are about half a dozen people in town who are doing rehabilitation where they have to drive into Longreach and back," Mr Jackson said.

"This will provide them with a facility where they don't have to commute.

"They will have 24/7 access to the equipment they need."

Currently, the aim is to charge users of the gym only $50, however, there may come some complications.

Having such a low charge, while good for the immediate community, may put pressure on Longreach businesses such as LRE Phoenix Fitness.

"We want to make it as affordable as possible so that everyone can use it because that's the idea of it," Mr Jackson said.

"We also need to factor in the eventual replacement of equipment and insurance.

"We have not discussed whether we're going to factor in if Longreach residents will be able to use it or how that will play out.

"We don't want to step on the toes of the Phoenix gym either."

curate information swell - especially when it comes to historical information," Mr Baskett added.

"If you go down into Muttaburra, some traditional signage and paintings might highlight the different traditional owners, but like Boomerang Valley.

"Winton has a history - sometimes a dark history - and we need to remember these things so they don't happen again.

"Some of these things might take a little longer to establish.

The mayor is hoping to get the group up and running over the next few months with anticipation that local leaders will be able to drive the initiative.

"We just want to make Winton a great, inclusive community," he said.

"I always thought it was, but the results of the survey will just make it better."

Local bid for country universities

By Michael R Williams

The Longreach Regional Council is currently preparing an application for funding to create a country university that is likely to utilise infrastructure from the Longreach Pastoral College.

Country universities, like the Country University Centre in Roma, are a Federal Government initiative that allows rural students to have access to a studying place, much like a city university.

The universities have seen huge success in recent years.

"Longreach was a natural location for one, so we did apply for the last round of funding but were unsuccessful as that round of funding went to Mt Isa," Longreach Regional Council Mayor Tony Rayner said.

"We're now looking at applying for another opportunity for a country university to be based in Longreach

"It would be probably more appropriate to access a building at the former [Longreach] Pastoral College, and that's something we would negotiate if we were successful with the [future] new owners of the Longreach Pastoral College."

While the centre will not host courses of its own, it will act as an ideal location for local students, or placement nurses, to continue their studies.

"Some students may prefer to live in their region when they undertake study on a part-time basis," Mr Rayner said.

Across the state, the record $22.6 billion Health Budget includes investment in new infrastructure and more beds; a larger workforce; a focus on mental health; and innovative reforms to Queensland's health system.

This includes a $334 million investment in The Royal Flying Doctor Service; enhanced capacity of the Queensland Ambulance Service through a $1.1 billion investment.

This will include building the capacity and capability of the workforce by continuing the Queensland Government's commitment for an additional 535 ambulance operatives during this term of government, as well as 130 new and replacement ambulance vehicles. Minister for Health and Ambulance Services Yvette D'Ath said the State Budget would support strong growth in the health workforce, committing to employ an extra 9475 staff in this term of government.

"Investment in our healthcare workforce is vital – they are our greatest asset, and the reason Queenslanders continue to receive firstclass healthcare every day," she said.

Minister D'Ath said the budget included $1.1 billion for the Queensland Ambulance Service, and a focus on improving mental health and wellbeing.

"The investment will help QAS prioritise regional and rural services to ensure accessible healthcare no matter the location, as we recruit more frontline staff and open new facilities," she said. "It just suits them to live and or to work without having to go away full time. "It may be that people are currently employed here, such as a nurse in a hospital, this would allow them to undertake additional study and stay in the community."

Roma's Country University Centre, in its only one-year lifespan, has quickly become one of Australia's most recognised places for country tertiary education.

"It's blown all expectations out of the water," said Maranoa Regional Council Mayor Tyson Golder.

"It's nearly doubled [in profits] what had been budgeted for.

"If Longreach gets one, I suspect, they will find the same thing."

'No' to respite centre

By Karen Simmons and Michael R Williams

Leanne Kohler, chairperson of Outback Independent Living said they are back to the drawing board after they failed to secure the Longreach Pastoral College facility for a respite centre.

Outback Independent Living is a not-forprofit community group aimed at providing sustainable accommodation that supports long-term independent living and short-term respite for people with disabilities and special needs

Mrs Kohler said they have been on a threeyear-plus journey to get this far, so it is pretty disappointing to have it all fall-through.

'We have 264 people on some sort of NDIS plan or pensions and in many of the communities there is not many short-term or longterm respite centre," Mrs Kohler said.

"It is important we have the same services that city residents have. Our needs are not less important.

"We have an ageing population out here looking after adult clients and we need something secure and operating for these parents looking after older children with special needs.

Outback Independent Living had put in an expression of interest for the Longreach Pastoral College to Longreach Council.

"When I spoke to the College state representative, they said the minister hadn't made a decision on it," Mrs Kohler added.

"They said they can't hand over a state asset to a community group, but they can hand it back to Longreach Council."

Mrs Kohler said their group couldn't possibly purchase the college and if council are given the responsibility of the facility, it would need to be upgraded with federal and state funding.

"But we are a community group that can improve the quality of life out here for residents and increase employment.'

The challenges are very different for rural and remote NDIS clients in regards to distances to travel, access to services and pricing structures.

"How can you afford to fly to Brisbane for $1000 with only a $64 rebate? Mrs Kohler continued.

Local interests gathered at the Information Session into the Royal Commission Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability.

"In many cases people can't afford to do it, so they can't use the services.

Mrs Kohler revealed one client's parents are in their 70s, and when they need respite their adult child has to travel a long way to Long-reach on a bus and stay in a hotel by themself. "They sit alone in a motel with no activities to do.

"It is too expensive in the tourist season and sometimes they can't even book in for these families.

Mrs Kohler reinstated the need for the local government to have the disability sector on their radar and to be given a voice.

"Family after family leave the region as they are not getting the services here.

"We want to hear from the families out here around what they have to go through as we will be putting in a submission into the Royal Commission into disability."

On their visit to the region, the Longreach Leader caught up with Steve Wettenhall and Mark Reimers regarding the Disability Royal Commission.

Steve Wettenhall, Oueensland jurisdiction lawyer for Your Story legal support said they offer free and confidential legal advice for those thinking of engaging with the Disability Royal Commission.

"The issues that people have raised with us throughout rural and remote Queensland are quite unique to these communities," Mr Wettenhall said.

"Things like access and continuity of services and particularly in the health arena in regards health professionals."

Reimers, Stateholder Engagement and Partnership Manager for Lotus Support Services said the Royal Commission on disability is more about addressing the violence, abuse, neglect and exploitation of clients and carers.

"Often in regional areas we are hearing about neglect and financial exploitation through unethical service providers," Mr Reimers said.

"We hear if a client - who is born and bred here - receives a package through the scheme, they have to leave their town as there aren't any services here.

"We have heard from people being charged $270 in mileage, each way to be provided services out on their property. And yet they can't get patient money to use the service in Brisbane.'

"It very very difficult to get any of the therapy services out here for children.'

Mr Reimers said the Royal Commission is about best-practice systems change and unless the commission hears from people out here, they can't make recommendations.

"So if people are experiencing systemic neglect or have been impacted by a lack of services it would be great if they could raise that issue and make recommendations on how the government could fix the issue," he added.

Community members can find out more information from the Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of People with Disability website. https://disability.royalcommission.gov.au/

The final date for submissions is December 31, 2022.

More kickin' with rodeo at showgrounds

By Michael R Williams

The annual Longreach Rodeo returns to the showgrounds once again for an "awesome night" of barrel racing and rough stock.

The expectation is - after recent rains - the rough stock will be fatter and there will be "more kickin", according to Longreach Rodeo Association president Lawrence Moniz.

'The rodeo will be a little bit different to the last year because of the rain," he said.

"A lot of things have been cancelled, so a lot of people have been looking forward to the rodeo.

"We'll have good riders this year, there's 12 in the bronc ride and 10 in the open bull ride and the barrel races as well.

"It'll be a good night for it."

There is currently a slight worry that predicted rains on Thursday night will make the event more difficult to manage-other than that, management for the event has been smooth.

"About the same amount of jockeys," Mr

Moniz said.

"The committee has been behind it all and we've had some good sponsors.

"The rodeo will start at 4.30pm with the barrel race.

"Then we'll go into the rough stock.

"At about 8.30pm we'll have some live music and dancing.

"Get down there to see some bucking bulls and horses-you don't see these sorts of things in the city.

"It'll be an awesome night."

Veterans wellbeing

Recently a report into life as a veteran produced as part of an ongoing partnership between the Australian Government's Department of Veterans' Affairs and the Australian Institute of Health and Welfare has been produced.

The report indicated that many former former Defence Force members have been able to rejoining civilian life and have a positive impact on their communities-but it also reminds us that this is not the case for everyone.

Minister for Veteran's Affairs Matt Keogh welcomed the release of the Australian Institute of Health and Welfare's Understanding the wellbeing characteristics of ex-serving ADF members.

"This is the first report of its kind that provides such detailed analysis of data on employment status, income, educational qualifications, home ownership and family and household makeup of ex-ADF members," he said.

Early years skills exodus

As a part of the Jobs and Skills summit held in Canberra, early childhood workers have called for urgent reform to industrial relation laws that affect every employee.

"Early childhood teachers are a case in point-they've endured low pay for a long time, and now they're leaving the sector in droves, leading to acute staff shortages," said Independent Education Union of Australia NSW/ACT Branch Secretary Mark Northam.

"Sector-wide bargaining would be a big step in the right direction.

"Currently, early childhood teachers face an adversarial system-they have to negotiate in small workplaces with individual employers or volunteer committees who are unfamiliar with industrial relations laws, and as a result, their salaries and conditions have not progressed as they should."

Dementia awareness

In the lead up for Dementia Action Week, a free events toolkit has been released by Dementia Australia, with the goal of spreading awareness. The toolkit includes resources to help you host an event or get-together.

Dementia Australia CEO Maree McCabe AM said the toolkit was a valuable resource for anyone who wanted to support people living with dementia in their community.

"We know discrimination has a significant impact on people living with dementia, their families and carers, and a little support from the community and healthcare professionals can make a big difference," she said.

A 'fair go' for all

With Child Protection Week fully underway, Full Stop Australia would like to remind people of the importance of this year's theme, "every child, in every community, needs a fair go."

Full Stop Australia Chief Executive Officer, Hayley Foster, said concrete steps must be taken to combat abuse.

"There are some really tangible actions that can be taken to protect Australian children from sexual abuse," she said.

"We need to afford them greater protections when giving evidence so we can reliably hold sexual predators to account and prevent them from re-offending.'

Mums up to the challenge

By Michael R Williams

Despite a large portion of the route deemed unsafe, local mothers did not give up on this year's Megan Walker Mini-marathon.

"They're unstoppable these mums," said co-organiser Rosemary Champion.

"I've always said if you want anything done you meet a mum with a kid who has Cystic Fibrosis.

"We've done the same thing for 32 years, except this year, now we know what we can do with the weather."

Ms Champion claimed that local mums whose children are living with Cystic Fibrosis were behind the organising of a State School bus that drove locals from the bridge at Apex Park to Muttaburra-Cramsie road as the track had been deemed unsafe to run on.

Without that decison, 160 runners, joggers, bike-riders, and Dennis drivers would have had to turn their backs on this year's fundraiser for Cystic Fibrosis, a genetic disease described as one of the most debilitating.

"It's run on behalf of Cystic Fibrosis Queensland and for the last 32 years, we've raised over $130,000," Ms Champion said.

"The event is named in memory of my niece Megan Walker who lost her battle with Cystic Fibrosis 23 years ago.

"She was born in 76, and back then the treatment for Cystic Fibrosis was quite barbaric.

"Megan was a very brave little person, at 14 she came out and told the world that she had cystic fibrosis; it's a very brave thing for a teenager to say that."

At the time a group of firemen from Melbourne were running around Australia to raise $1 million, but they didn't come to Longreach.

"So we thought, why don't we have our own run," Ms Champion said.

"Now we have three little people in our community with Cystic Fibrosis, and their mothers, we couldn't do without them.

"We had Rotary on board and we have over $2000 in prizes; the sponsors have been just extraordinary."

Ms Champion credited the support of the community on the day, but said much is still to be done about Cystic Fibrosis.

"Until we have a cure, we need to emphasise the importance of organ donors," she said.

The Wilson lost one of their children to Cystic Fibrosis.

"In order to survive, these little people are going to need donated organs."

Despite the grave nature of the cause, it event was visibly pleasurable.

"It's also a great way for people to meet you know new dogs meeting new dogs," Ms Champion said.

"I think a lot of people love to run in the country—it's only 11kms.

"People just have a good time."

Rosie Wilson from Aramac also lost a son to the disease.

"We had a son with Cystic Fibrosis - he was born in 84 - and we lost him," she said.

"[We walk and raise funds so we can] stop it or make their life better is always good so other parents don't go through what we did.

"People really need to help, so the kids can have a better life.

50 years of cultural association history celebrated

By Michael R Williams

The Barcaldine Cultural Association has turned 50 and a gathering was held for locals to soak in the history.

In that half-century, the association has undergone a few transitions, with locals participating in spinning and weaving, silk painting, silversmithing, pottery, wheels, and kiln, among other things.

"It's [an important association] because it gives people a creative outlet," president Nikki Williams said.

The Barcaldine Cultural Association started in 1972, and while membership has dropped off, Ms Williams is adamant it can see new life past 50 years.

Christie Stewart and Jenny Mace enjoying the celebrations.

"Unfortunately we only have one original member who was unable to attend today.

"There are a lot of people who had been members, but life got in the way."

"But I'm feeling optimistic that we may get new members into the future.

"A lot more fellas were a part of the association back in the day.

"Women didn't have to work back in the day, so they could come on a Wednesday.

"The world has changed, and we need to a move with it."

Ms Williams sees the association as an important part of the make up of the Barcaldine township.

"I prefer to be able to sit quietly and do my own thing, personally.

"Especially for the older people, this is somewhere you can go and talk about things while they keep their hands and minds active. "For some who live alone, it's a great social outing."

Ms Williams confirmed that everyone is welcome at the association that is always looking for new members.

"You don't have to come during an activity, if you just want to come at your own time and do your own thing, that's fine."

Unknown hit to CW racing

By Michael R Williams

After only just having on the Birdsville Cup early this year, trainer Todd Austin along with central west jockey Ric McMahon have been suspended with immediate effect by the Queensland Racing Integrity Commission.

This follows after the launch of an investigation into a device carried by McMahon on an Austin-trained horse in trackwork that had been spotted in a photograph that circulated on social media.

The concern is the device held by McMahon had been a jigger, an instrument used to shock a horse and has been deemed illegal by Racing Queensland.

QRIC commissioner Shane Gillard stated, 'QRIC has immediately suspended the licence of two Queensland thoroughbred participants. A Stewards inquiry remains ongoing.'

"If a licence is suspended, a participant cannot partake in any activity relevant to the licence category they hold."

A major concern regarding this news comes from the central west racing community at large

"It is not a great look for racing," said Longreach Jockey Club president Andrew Watts.

"I think it's very important that we let the powers that be make their decision and let the wheels of justice roll on.

"In terms of the central west, it's devastating.

Todd Austin is a major player in central west racing and an important part of the Barcaldine Jockey Club committee and Ric McMahon is the region's leading jockey.

"The racing community is like a family," said Mr Watts.

"It's very important to note these types of things do happen, and Racing Queensland's Integrity Commission is placed to make a decision on this matter.

"The repercussions are enormous.

Picture: SHARON CHAPMAN

"With both trainer and jockey stood down, where do these horses end up?

"Both Todd and Toni Austin are integral to the Barcaldine jockey club, what happens there?

"The great grass track in the outback might not have a committee."

Already trainers are removing their horses from the Austin stable.

"There are lots of local owners who might not be able to keep their horses locally-finding new trainers, finding new jockeys," said Mr Watts.

"It is not as if one president or treasurer stands down there's another five waiting.

"In any committee, there are people doing multiple jobs and to find new replacements and people who have that passion of racing, it might not be that easy.

"The wheels at QRIC move slowly - and at the moment both jockey and trainer are stood down."

When it comes to this year's jockey premiership, of which McMahon is a clear leader, it will come down to the QRIC's decision.

"With the central west jockey premiership, we run by the rules of Racing Queensland," Mr Watts said.

"If anyone is suspended longer than three months they are no longer eligible for any awards."

Mr Watts has urged locals to treat the story with empathy.

"It's important for people to understand this is racing and life goes on," he said.

"I think there's a lot of false media surrounding Ric McMahon and Todd Austin and other members of our community that is untrue.

"I think for the sake of people's mental health and the good of the sport-it's important we stick to the facts and let the course of justice take its course."

Drive for drought still relevant despite rain, says founder

By Michael R Williams

The third annual Long Drive for Drought has run its course for 2022, and drivers were given a different view of the outback after recent rains.

The Long Drive for Drought began in 2019 when western Queensland was in one of its worst droughts on record and is an event w bunch of classic Landcruiser enthusiasts drive through outback Queensland raising funds for the Drought Angels.

"There are a few goals we try to achieve: one is making sure we stay at small towns and communities to spend money as we go along, raising money for Drought Angels, and the fourth one is having fun ourselves," said founder of Long Drive for Drought Brett Reeman.

"Every cent we raise - we don't have any fees or overheads - goes to Drought Angels who are a small charity with low overheads themselves-they maximise the amount of money that supports farmers directly, and they try to support farmers who support their local communities as well."

This year has brought new challenges as instead of dusty and dry roads, drivers have had to be careful not to tear up muddy backroads.

Drivers from the Long Drive for Drought resting at the Stockman's Hall of Fame.

"The difference this year is we are driving through country that isn't in drought," said Mr Reeman.

"Of course, some places are still needing more, but some places are looking fabulous.

"As we go along we've been talking to farmers, they really explained to us that one good season doesn't really break a drought.

"With the other challenges that come, like stock prices and building up your herd, it means a lot of them are spending money investing rather than reaping the rewards out of the rain.

"That'll come later, and without more rain, they may not be able to maximise things.

"So really a lot of them are going into further debt to take the gamble that there will be more rain." The rain has been so apparent that drivers go bogged when camping at the Winton footy fields.

"I think that it [seeing the region get through drought] gives our drivers a lot of pride," Mr Reeman said.

"They are out here spending their own money, fuel's ridiculously expensive.

"I think they're proud of making a difference.

"When we get the response that we get from the communities, especially the small ones, when the local kids come out from school and line up in the street, I think, particularly our newcomers, they're blown away by that.'

"It goes back to people in those communities seeing that people care.

"Seeing that, we get a lot back."

Drivers Grant and Karen Bauer

Drivers Grant and Karen Bauer from North Brisbane have been on every Long Drive for Drought since its inception.

"It's been a fantastic trip the whole way," said Grant.

25 years of ride purpose

UNGREACH RO SATURDAY 10TH SEPTEMBER 2022 • LONGREACH SHOWGROUNDS

By Michael R Williams

For the 25th year, the Southern Cross Ride For Charity visited Longreach to spend locally and raise awareness for Spina Bifida.

Southern Cross Ride for Charity Organiser Michael "Felix" Dvoracsek said the association started in '88 and was put together by a friend who had family members who were affected by Spina Bifida and found out they were not getting any funding from the government.

"So he decided to get some mates together and do a ride to raise money and awareness,' he said.

"The first in September week is Spina Bifida week, fortunately, the Spina Bifida group in Brisbane has gone into receivership—now we will be putting our funding into charities, specifically children's charities.'

Cinema's big screen return

By Michael R Williams

"Why did I want to bring back the cinema?" Star Cinema owner Norm Salisbury is sitting on a small stool behind the cinema counter, the candy fridge completely emptied and a glint in his eye.

"I'm very passionate, let's put it that way. "As I told people downtown, and distributors who would ring me up, I've missed this.

"I tried to talk to my wife into letting me open up, and she was rather settled about it.

"Anyway, to cut the story short, we got here and we're very happy so far."

Selling out on its first night back, and coming close throughout the weekend, Mr Salisbury is confident his new model of monthly screenings will ensure the longevity of the cinema.

"I think a cinema in a town of this size is not hard to keep open, but the cost for us is not to just buy film and show it, we have to have insurance, we have to have the air-conditioning and all that done up," Mr Salisbury said.

"The buying of the films is no different but to buy two programs every week, you can't get two big ones.

"So you have to go down into the next class - and some of them are good - but they don't always get bums on seats.

"And also, there a lot of different things that happen around town, and I wouldn't know about it, and we'd clash.

"So hopefully, this time, I'll know about it, and we'll know what's happening.

"I like to see other things myself." Mr Salisbury thanked a number of people who helped make the comeback successful. "We've got Carolyn Carr here who's my backstop here all year round," he said.

"We've had Matt Delsar, Patsy, David Khine, Jamie Worland and Justin and Shannon from House Proud who cleaned the cinema free of charge, and heaps and heaps of people have offered to help.

"We've been overwhelmed with the number of people willing to help.

"And of course, the community who came all weekend."

Next month's screening will be of Bullet Train and Where the Crawdads Sing; they will likely screen on the first Friday of October.

Livestock in clear focus

I'd like to start by thanking everyone who came to the Emergency Animal Disease Preparedness Forum in Longreach last week, hosted by RAPAD with Biodiversity Queensland.

The free information and training forum had a specific focus on Foot and Mouth Disease, Lumpy Skin Disease, and African Swine Fever.

We were lucky to hear from Queensland's Chief Veterinary Officer, Dr Allison Crook, who told us we should be alert to these diseases but not alarmed by them.

Dr Crook outlined what the response to any outbreak would entail, in line with the nationally agreed AUSVETPLAN disease response strategy

Biosecurity Queensland also outlined ways our local industry can respond.

That starts with looking out for and knowing the signs of animal disease.

Perhaps most importantly, we should report anything unusual to the Emergency Animal Disease Watch Hotline on 1800 675 888 as soon as we see it.

Local industry can also protect their property by having a biosecurity management plan in place, keeping their biosecurity entity registrations up-to-date, and using the Farm Check-In app to help staff and visitors recognise biosecurity risks before entering their place.

Another key way our industry can help is to make sure livestock movements are accurately recorded on the NLIS database and the movement is reflected accurately on the waybill.

If you missed the workshop, you can find more information by visiting biosecurity.qld. gov.au, or calling 13 25 23.

Next week is SES week in Oueensland, celebrating the staff and volunteers from all walks of life who form the State Emergency Service.

The SES play a very important disaster response role in our region, and it's important to recognise the work they do for our communities

Storm season is coming up and we're looking for more volunteers to help us prepare for the season ahead.

So if you've ever thought about volunteering in our community, now is the perfect time to make a real difference.

You will be doing something great for your community and for yourself-the professional and personal development on offer through service in the SES is second to none.

You will receive free accredited training that you can use in your work, and there are even longer-term professional pathways if you're interested in Emergency Management as a career.

If you want to find out more about joining our local SES or even just show your support, they're having an open day at their base in Miner Road this weekend. Join them for a free sausage sizzle, face painting, and demonstrations from 10am to 2pm this Saturday 10 September.

Please come along and show your support for our dedicated SES volunteers.

Applications for our Regional Arts Development Fund (RADF) are due Friday 23 September.

RADF is a great initiative we deliver in partnership with the Queensland Government.

If you have an idea for an arts project or any arts programming you'd like to see in our region, visit longreach.qld.gov.au/radf for more information.

You can view the application materials and even watch our step-by-step video guide to submitting a successful application.

The Ilfracombe Post Office Expressions of Interest process is now officially open!

Submissions close at 2pm on Thursday 22 September.

Each confidential Expression of Interest will be assessed based on the benefit to the community and the demonstrated knowledge and experience before any recommendation is made to Council.

Councillors will ultimately decide what to do next, if anything, and will update the community before any further decision is made.

Rates notices were issued this week, on Wednesday 7 September, and payments are due Friday 7 October.

If you have not received your notice, please get in touch with Council directly.

Be sure to pay in full before the deadline to receive a 10 per cent discount.

You can find more information and even pay online, by visiting longreach.qld.gov.au/ rates.

That is also where you can find out how to apply to pay by instalments, or how to apply for a financial hardship plan.

I will be back with another column in two weeks

Until then, you can find direct emails and phone numbers for me and for each of my fellow Councillors at longreach.qld.gov.au/elected-members.

If you want to know anything at all, reach out to one of us-or contact Council directly at (07) 4658 4111 (24hrs), or via email at assist@ longreach.qld.gov.au.

Legends of Ilfracombe: Old and new champions

I was in town last week picking up a late birthday present from the post office. By town, I mean Ilfracombe.

I decided to sit in ANZAC Memorial Park, with its rotunda, pool, spa and children's playground, to write cards to my kids.

(Yes, I know, I'm old-fashioned that way.) Before heading back to the post office, I took a photo of Matty Scott's statue, having pride of position between the pool and playground.

He is known around the ridges as a State of Origin and footy legend, but at Ilfracombe, he is fondly remembered for his lamb marking prowess.

(Now that you're retired, there's a current crop that could use your skills, Matty.)

Once my cards were posted, I took the opportunity to look around, at the Post Office, the Wellshot, as well as pointing my camera toward the north side of the Landsborough Highway, dominated by the Ilfracombe Folk Museum, which consists of Heritage Park, the Romani Hall Memorial, Oakhampton Cottage and of course the famed Machinery Mile, with my personal favourite, a Furphy water tank, on display.

There is more, but that is how far I got with my meanderings.

Quite an abundance of heritage for a town that nowadays has a population of less than 300.

Of course, there were more people back in the days when the places and people honoured here were established.

But it is the current, tight-knit core of the community that has been responsible for the honouring.

I would be remiss if I did not mention one of our neighbours-a driving force behind much that you can see, in particular the Machinery Mile, which is why it now bears his name, the Lynn Cameron Machinery Mile.

I can not think of Mr Cameron without picturing him at the wheel of his grader, since many of our encounters involved him grading roads or fighting fires.

It is fitting that there are so many graders incorporated into the Machinery Mile.

Mr Cameron is a lifetime member of the Rural Fire Brigade, as well as the Ilfracombe Historical Society, so you can see how his passions combined to create a truly memorable slice of Ilfracombe life.

He would be the first to tell you he did not do it on his own, but I can tell you he put a lot of time, effort and love into the enterprise.

Mr Cameron is but one of a legion of epic personalities, some sadly passed, but many still remaining, who are responsible for what Ilfracombe is, an unlikely survivor of more than a century in a region where small town survival is not a given, especially for a town only 20 minutes down the road from the regional centre of Longreach.

There is not much in the way of infrastructure left, and what's there is threatened all the time, but it is those indomitable locals that keep Ilfracombe going.

And, happily, there are plenty more where Mr Cameron came from.

A welcome to Outback

By Robyn Stephens, Event Coordinator

Welcome to the Winton Outback Festival's 50th Golden Anniversary 1972-2022—a Festival proudly home-grown; hard to believe the Outback Festival has reached this memorable milestone.

From small beginnings in 1972, and born out of a devastating drought in the 1960s, with the desire of our local community members to put Winton on the map, this iconic festival has attracted people from all walks of life both Australia and overseas.

Events like the Outback Festival are vital to Winton's tourism prosperity, engaging visitors with the locals and the community and creating memorable experiences.

For many years the Outback Festival was staged over 10 days and continues to be staged during the Queensland School Holiday period.

Since 2001 the event changed to 5 days with local sports events on either side of the festival.

Volunteers are the lifeblood of the Festival attracting a volunteer force of over 80+ to assist with a Jam packed program with something for everyone no matter your age or your fitness level.

Events like this are not only a source of community pride, but they also showcase our historic town and the region as a great place to visit and provide support for local tourism, small businesses and employment.

I thank the dedicated members of the Committee, a relatively small group of hard-working volunteers who devote so much of their time and energy to staging the Outback Festival.

To the Community of Winton, this is your festival and one you can be justifiably proud of, and we thank you for the continued support you give to us.

To our many sponsors, some new and others who have supported the Outback Festival over many years, I give a Big Thank-You for your wonderful support to assist us in staging one of the most successful non-metropolitan festivals in Queensland.

To our many visitors, enjoy your stay and our friendly hospitality as our Winton Community is renowned for, and I look forward to your return for the 2023 Outback Festival 19-23 September.

Message from the mayor

By Gavin Baskett

It's hard to believe that in two weeks' time it will be the 50th anniversary of the Outback Festival.

A tiny festival that started from humble beginnings in 1972 to create economic stimulus during the drought has grown to be one of the iconic events in Queensland.

The Winton Tourism Association was established only four years earlier and this showed the vision of our locals at the time of the benefits of tourism and what this great town and shire has to offer.

A massive congratulations go out to all the committee members over the years and Robyn Stephens for the great work in growing the Festival and constantly reinventing itself.

Kudos! Every year building on more of Winton's expansive heritage.

The festival has since been reduced to a five-day event but still attracts a lot of visitors to Winton.

There may be a lot of tourists that put this on their bucket list but it is the ex-residents that return religiously every two years that make the week.

Nothing better than catching up with mates every second year, having a few beers and chatting about the old days.

The Outback Festival is famous for its unique outback events.

Many of these have been around since the early days and others have been added through the years.

The World Crayfish Derby was an iconic event for many decades and was highlighted by the effort teams put into dressing up and putting on a show while presenting their crayfish.

The signature event in the itinerary now would be the Australian Dunny Derby.

This attracts a massive crowd on the Friday night at the Rec Grounds to watch teams in all their regalia battle it out for the prize money, the glory and a flash wooden toilet seat. I do not think there's any more an Australian event than four people pushing a dunny on wheels while the "choker" sits on the thunder-box holding on for dear life.

Another great attraction that is very popular with the patrons for the whole week is the Men and Women Ironman.

This is five to six events over five days and is a true test of stamina, especially if the competitors are socialising in the evenings.

A few other items on the itinerary include; the Grand Parade, the Truckies Reunion, wool bale rolling, swag and broom tossing, egg throwing and catching (without breaking it), and lots more for kids and adults.

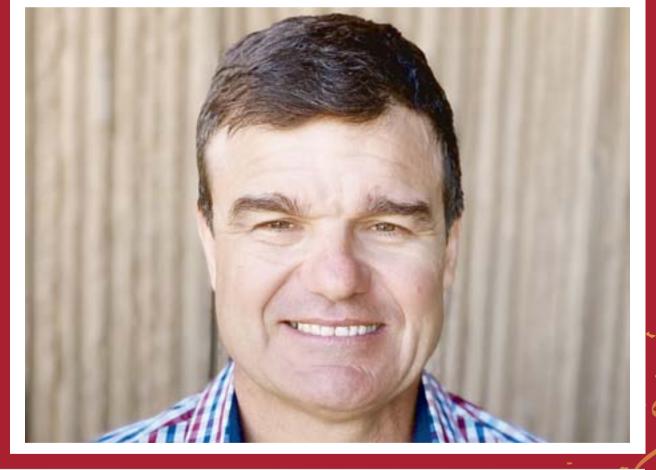

These are all but a small part of the Outback Festival biennially, but one thing has never changed, it still attracts great numbers to town who support local businesses.

We were in the Newsagency for over twenty years and the week of the Outback Festival was always the busiest.

It is a great boost, in September, for the local businesses at the end of the tourist season and can not be overstated how much of a positive impact this is.

I encourage everyone in the region to put the 50th Anniversary Outback Festival on your calendar and visit Winton for a day or the whole weekend.

If this is too short of notice for 2022 start planning for 2023.

WINTON - QUEENSLAND

50 years' party

By Michael R Williams

The 50th Golden Anniversary of the Winton Outback Festival is only a handful of sleeps away.

The celebration is being held from 23 September to 25 September, and while it is not the full bi-annual event that spans five days, it promises to be a wholly unique event that promises to wow Winton and central west locals current and former.

Event organiser Robyn Stephens said the following will be at the event:

- The 1 RAR Military Band will be attending for the duration of the festival, and we look forward to the professional entertainment.

- Children's entertainment with Windy Wizard—a name everybody knows in the north: he will be clowning, juggling, and bringing lots of exciting things.

He might even pull a rabbit out of a hat, he's pretty good this fella.

- The Memphis Movers—now this is a very unique brand of entertainment with their novelty car and they are very popular with festival goers.

- The legendary king of rock and roll and country, Jade Hurley—he's gonna really strike this party up!

"We're bringing all these favourite artists back to put a show on," Ms Stephens said.

The celebration will feature more than just live entertainment, with a theming of nostalgia, the event will also host auctions and memorabilia.

"Two of the most lucrative auction items will actually be two dunny doors, painted by Sean Leahy," said. Ms Stephens.

"I can't tell you what will be on those doors yet, you'll have to just see at the auction."

"Over the years, we gathered a lot of old photographs; we got a lot of scrapbooks, we got a lot of scrapbooks, we got everything. "We now have it all digitalised, and on Friday night people will be able to see the highlights and memories of the Outback Festival—and all of the storytelling from the past 50 years.

"We have people who have been at every festival, and some of those people are coming back.

"They just want to be here to celebrate that 50th anniversary."

The event is not one to be missed.

If you are living outside the Winton area, get ready to pitch your swag or rent a room.

"The people of the central west should come to our event and enjoy a great time," Ms Stephens said.

"It would be advisable to buy tickets online for the Gala 50th Anniversary Dinner at the Winton Airport.

"That will be spectacular.

"We're also going to partner with the RFDS and do the lighting of the lantern with a large fireworks display.

"This event has been an event that has evolved over the years, and since 1972 it's been about building an economic drive in Winton.

"From that, we've created an event that has been beneficial economically for all of the outback."

Ms Stephens thanked the tireless committee for helping organise the event.

"This year's event has been organised by the dedicated committee who has worked hard to put this program together.

"I might say that for the 50-year celebration, we are bringing a lot of people back.

"A lot of people have passed... but, but managers, treasures, presidents, and festival queens are coming back.

"In 2023, the Outback Festival will return and be held from 19-23 September and will be a five-day event like normal."

Flying Doctor gala dinner

By Royal Flying Doctor Service

For 94 years, the Royal Flying Doctor Service (RFDS) has been touching down on remote outback airstrips and providing vital care to Queenslanders in the furthest corner of the state.

While much has changed since the first RFDS flight took off in May 1928 to retrieve two patients from Julia Creek, the partnership between the Flying Doctor and communities such as Winton has always remained strong.

RFDS (Queensland Section) chief executive officer Meredith Staib said when it comes to the Flying Doctor delivering its life-saving services, it really is a team effort.

"We simply could not deliver our services without the support of communities like Winton," Ms Staib said.

"Our crews fly millions of kilometres and land thousands of times each year—including on some of the state's most remote airstrips.

"But this wouldn't be possible without the help of community members who ensure outback runways are safe and illuminated, so we can land quickly and safely to reach patients in emergencies—24 hours a day, seven days a week.

"On the ground, whether we're delivering a primary health care clinic, providing mental health consultations, or treating patients at our mobile dental surgery, we're incredibly proud to be a part of the communities we serve.

"As we propel towards 100 years of the Flying Doctor, I would like to thank each and every community member for their support—you are a part of our team and we simply could not do it without you."

As part of the special 50th milestone of the Winton Outback Festival, and to celebrate the enduring partnership between the RFDS and the community, you are invited to join the RFDS for the Golden 50th Anniversary Gala Dinner at the 2022 Outback Festival on Saturday 24 September. The Outback Festival was an initiative of the fledgling Winton Tourist Promotion Association.

In November 1971 a community meeting was held, involving representatives from twenty-one local groups, and supported by the Winton Shire Council, to discuss a proposal for a week of activities and entertainment.

The idea behind the proposal was to give support to the local economy which was struggling due to the previous years of drought conditions and to draw tourists and past residents back to the town to see how it had changed in so many ways, to reminisce with friends and family, and to enjoy a variety of gatherings and amusements.

Next, a name for this proposed celebration was needed.

A competition was announced, and Raymond Jackson, a local Winton High School student, suggested "Outback Festival" and it was chosen; the Outback Festival attracts people from all walks of life both Australia and overseas.

Events like the Outback Festival are vital to Winton's tourism prosperity, engaging visitors with the locals and the community and creating memorable experiences.

In keeping with the meaning of why the Festival was initiated in 1972 - as a way of supporting the community to benefit from a financial injection and responding to the effects caused by drought the lasting benefits - the committee used the event to attract visitors and bring a welcome economic boost to their much-loved outback town.

The first 10-day festival was a great success and the Committee decided to stage the event again in 1973, and from that year the Festival has been held biennially held in the odd calendar years.

The Outback Festival Committee has successfully operated over this 50-year history showcasing the very best in entertainment, arts, community spirit and hospitality over a fun-filled program for five days.

The Festival was endorsed by leading travel magazine 'Australian Traveller' in 2011 as one of the "Top 100 things to do before you die," and the growing visitor numbers certainly reflect this sentiment.

The Festival program celebrates the down-to-earth spirit of the bush, and fully deserves the title "World's quirkiest festival".

Our signature event the Australian Dunny Derby has now been recognised internationally and has gained the attention of teams competing from Germany and Iceland in 2019—and we gained the attention of BBC Glasgow, a film crew of eight who travelled halfway across the world to attend the 2013 event to compete in the famous Australian Dunny Derby.

Without the many dedicated volunteers past and present that have been part of the Outback Festival's journey devoting so much of their time and energy, this award-winning Festival would not have been so successful.

It has been one of fun and enjoyment and good times and stories remain with so many people.

Turning the tide

Nadine Garner, star of new ABC series Savage River, chats to Siobhan Duck about the gritty Australian drama, working outside her comfort zone and what she wants to see more of on screen

HERE'S a yawning gap in quality entertainment for teenagers in Australia both on screen and in real life, according to Nadine Garner. For Garner – herself, a mother of two teenaged sons – it's a source of ongoing frustration that young people's needs are not prioritised.

"I try to be vocal inside my union about things like children's television," she says.

"And I feel very passionate about teenagers having places to congregate. I've been speaking to my kids recently about designing teenage playgrounds. You know, why don't we design spaces where kids can loiter, and not get in trouble that's not a shopping centre or a skate park?"

Garner believes the huge success of the Netflix series Stranger Things proves there is an appetite for high quality dramas that are teencentric and should inspire Australian programmers to do more.

"It's one of my biggest bugbears as a parent," she says.

"We are great at talking about preschool and childcare, but we don't talk about teenagers. If we do, we talk about teenagers as though they're a problem. And we have done this to teenagers for generations. 'It's like we kind of wish they'd grow up and go away or something. Whereas we really need to lean into our teen years for our children's sake. We need to try to understand more. We need to make shows for them."

Recently streaming giants have breathed new life into old teen dramas, putting modern twists on Gossip Girl (Binge), Pretty Little Liars (Binge) and the soon-to-bereleased Heartbreak High (Netflix) with a new cast of dynamic young actors. But the success of these programs doesn't mean that Garner is keen to see The Henderson Kids rebooted

The iconic 1985 TV show about two orphaned teenagers making a fresh start in the country (and later the city) launched the careers of Garner, Kylie Minogue, Ben Mendelsohn, Jane Hall and Annie Jones and was a staple for families around Australia. "I think the world is a very different place now," forward in the world and negotiate relationships with new city kids, or country kids.

"It wasn't about virtual reality or all the issues that young people today are dealing with, which are very poignant and really important.

"So, I think The Henderson Kids was of its time. I think it was brilliantly made and I am very proud of it. But I don't think rebooting old shows that don't tackle the themes of today is very helpful."

Instead, Garner is keen to see fresh concepts make it to the screen. One such idea was Thirteen Reasons Why, the gritty 2017 Netflix series featuring her Savage River co-star Katherine Langford.

In Savage River, Garner and Langford play a mother and daughter reconnecting after Langford's character, Miki, is released from prison.

When Miki returns home, her hopes of putting the past behind her are stymied when she finds herself the chief suspect in a new murder.

Directed by The Dressmaker's Jocelyn Moorhouse, this riveting thriller features a stellar line up of Australian talent including Jacqueline McKenzie (Romper Stomper), Virginia Gay (Winners & Losers), Bernard Curry (Wentworth) and Mark Coles Smith (Mystery Road: Origin).

Filming the series in Bright, Victoria, during the pandemic was Uneasy homecoming:

Nadine Garner as Lynne, a mother reconnecting with her daughter Miki (Katherine Langford, below) after a prison sentence.

"And also, this was at a time when close contacts couldn't work either.

"So, you try making television like that with a cast this size as COVID nipping at your heels and it's really deeply stressful for the people who are in production."

Despite the added strains, Garner gives an arguably career-best performance as the world weary Lynne. Garner specifically asked the make-up team to make her look older and sun-damaged so that she would be utterly believable as a woman who has spent her life working outdoors in rural Victoria.

"She's not the average mother figure that you see on screen, in that she's the tough-love mother and kind of disappointed in her kids and in their choices too," she explains of Lynne.

"And, I mean, the relationship between her and Miki is really unusual. You just don't see those relationships on screen very often."

Some of the subject material in Savage River required its actors to deal with some dark and emotionally draining scenes, which admittedly posed a challenge for the empathetic Garner.

But Garner relishes being pushed outside her comfort zone, which is why she is now starring the Sydney theatre production of Tell Me I'm Here. Based on Anne Deveson's memoir, the play tells the poignant story of a mother's she reflects. "Young kids are about the internet now and social media. The Henderson Kids was made in a preinternet time. Our lives were analogue, and it was specifically about orphans who had to battle their way something of a "white-knuckling experience" for Garner.

Not only did she have to leave her two sons with their father for the duration of the shoot, but it meant working with the constant threat of border closures or the production being shut down.

"You've got COVID testing happening all the time, and people phoning in going: 'Well, I can't come in because I am a close contact' then you've got to have a really nimble production team that can pivot at any moment because they've lost cast or they've lost a director because people are waiting on test results," she explains. love for her mentally ill son.

"I know that I'm lending part of my life or some part of my spirit to this story," she explains.

"And I'm doing this because I believe this is an important story and know what it's going to cost me to do it and I will do it for a certain period of time and then I'll go, that's enough. I'm done. I can't do anymore. And luckily, the show's over.

"You don't get out of it without being touched by it and it does take its toll on you and you just have to be disciplined."

Movie Guide

PICK OF THE WEEK TRACKSIDE TALE SWITCHES GEARS

Friday RUSH ABC TV Plus, 8.30pm, MA15+ (2013)

Chris Hemsworth steps into the driver's seat for this flashy sports biopic directed by Ron Howard. The charismatic Hemsworth expertly portrays legendary British Formula One driver James Hunt, who was almost as famous for his playboy antics off the track as he was for his astonishing talent on it as he dominated the sport in the '7Os. Daniel Brühl (Inglourious Basterds) is excellent as Hunt's no-nonsense Austrian rival Niki Lauda. The on-track scenes are spectacular, but Rush has enough depth to appeal to more than just petrol heads as Howard delves into what it takes to be a champion. *** * * ***

THE LEGO BATMAN MOVIE 9Go!, Friday, 7.30pm, PG (2017)

Fans of 2014's surprisingly brilliant The Lego Movie and Batman tragics alike will lap up this satirical superhero spin-off. As well they should, because this is laugh-out-loud funny, and is packed with pop culture references. Will Arnett is back as the voice of the caped crusader, with Zach Galifianakis as his arch nemesis The Joker and Ralph Fiennes as reliable butler Alfred. Lightening up Wayne Manor is an accidentally adopted orphan (Michael Cera) – who's soon to become a familiar sidekick. ★★★

THE HOBBIT: THE DESOLATION OF SMAUG 9Go!, Saturday, 7.30pm, M (2013)

The second in the prequels to Peter Jackson's The Lord of the Rings trilogy, this one ups the ante as Bilbo Baggins (Martin Freeman, pictured), Gandalf the Grey (Ian McKellen) and their band of followers continue on their mission to reclaim Erebor from the evil dragon Smaug. The Desolation of Smaug is more about the journey than any solid events, but the action scenes, visuals and the incredible realisation of the wicked, fearsome Smaug are reason enough to watch. ★★★★

THE FOREIGNER Nine, Saturday, 10.30pm, MA15+ (2017)

Martial arts legend Jackie Chan (pictured) and former OO7 Pierce Brosnan turn in a pair of out-of-character performances in this action-thriller based on the novel The Chinaman by Stephen Leather. Chan plays Ngoc Minh Quan, a former Vietnam War special-forces operative whose daughter is killed in a bombing. Hell-bent on getting revenge, he sets his sights on Northern Ireland deputy First Minister Liam Hennessy (Brosnan), who he believes is to blame for the attack. *** * ***

THREE COLOURS: BLUE SBS World Movies, Sunday, 10.20pm, M (1993)

This first instalment of Polish filmmaker Krzysztof Kieslowski's modern filmic triptych, based on the ideals of the French Revolution, centres on a young mother (Juliette Binoche, pictured) who tries to fabricate a new life after the death of her famous composer husband and their daughter. Her liberty is examined through a series of reactionary situations. Kieslowski's framing of the mundane is a lesson in the power of photography and the music is sublimely revelatory. ****

A GOOD DAY TO DIE HARD 7mate, Monday, 8.30pm, M (2013)

In this fifth instalment of the Die Hard franchise, John McClane (Bruce Willis, pictured) jets off to Russia to help his wayward son Jack (Jai Courtney). But on discovering Jack is an undercover CIA operative working to prevent a nuclear weapons heist, father and son become a pair of gun-wielding mercenaries not to be messed with. Courtney shows all the right attributes – and muscle mass – for the perfect action hero. Fun for the extravagance of car chase scenes, bombs and battles. ★★★

THE INBETWEENERS 10 Shake, Tuesday, 8.30pm, MA15+ (2011)

Best friends Will (Simon Bird), Simon (Joe Thomas), Jay (James Buckley) and Neil (Blake Harrison) have – against all odds – graduated from secondary school and in this feature followup to the hit comedy series of the same name, the socially awkward lads head off to party destination Malia on the island of Crete. Their attempts at a rambunctious summer of sand, sun and sex will leave you cringing, but the inventive storylines and cheeky comedy will amuse fans of the series. ★★★

The Guide

PICK OF THE WEEK

THE GOOD FIGHT SBS Viceland, Saturday, 8.30pm

This acclaimed legal drama has always had its finger on the pulse with its compelling storylines ripped from the headlines, and its sixth and final season promises to deliver in spades. Over 10 episodes, Diane (Christine Baranski, pictured) struggles with an uneasy sense of déià vu - from the fallout of the reversal of Roe v. Wade to voting rights and the return of Cold War aggressions. Meanwhile, the lawyers of Reddick and Associates wonder if the violence points to an impending civil war. Fans of its predecessor The Good Wife will be pleased to see the return of Alan Cumming and Carrie Preston as Eli Gold and Elsbeth Tascioni, respectively.

SILENT WITNESS ABC TV, Sunday, 9.25pm

In this solid British crime drama, we're used to people disappearing, leaving and, more often than not, dying. But when a much-loved character such as Thomas (Richard Lintern) bites the dust, and Clarissa (Liz Carr) leaves the force to "focus more on the living", it feels like the series is starting again. Season 24 premieres with two familiar faces missing, and it will take a while to adjust. Pathologist Dr Nikki Alexander (Émilia Fox, pictured) is left standing, along with Jack (David Caves) and a new colleague in Dr Adam Yeun (Jason Yong). Tonight, Jack and Nikki enter a high-security prison to investigate the death of an inmate. It's a season that'll keep you on your toes.

AUSTRALIAN STORY ABC TV, Monday, 8pm

Retired rugby union star David Pocock (pictured) first appeared on this award-winning ABC staple in 2016, taking viewers back to his homeland Zimbabwe where, as a child, dramatic events shaped the passion that drove him both on and off the field. Fast-forward six years, and the former Wallabies captain now finds himself playing a pivotal role in Canberra as a politician. Cameras follow the newly minted Independent senator for the ACT as he navigates the responsibility of holding a crucial vote in the Upper House. Pocock used his maiden speech to detail his passion for "accessibility and inclusion" so he's no doubt keen to make his mark.

DATELINE SBS, Tuesday, 9.30pm

We're awash in a world where TV bingeing is common practice, but this current affairs show only needs one dose for maximum impact. Featuring hard-hitting exposés and outstanding journalism since 1984, you can't guess what emotion you'll be riding after watching, but you can count on contemplating complicated issues. This week, a controversial global drug trial that aims to alleviate the symptoms of a type of dwarfism is examined. In "Born Small", Marc Fennell (pictured) meets toddler Casper and his family as he looks at how Australian researchers are aiming at boosting growth in children with dwarfism and what this means for their tight-knit community.

Local jockey wins at Cup

By Tara Cosoleto, Aap

Darwin-trained thoroughbred Saccharo has come from behind to win the 140th Birdsville Cup.

Dubbed the 'Melbourne Cup of the Outback', the 1600-metre race on a red-dirt track is an annual tradition of the rural Queensland town of Birdsville.

Saturday evening's cup win was a first for Saccharo's Longreach-based jockey Robert Faehr and trainer Phillip Cole, who took home a $42,000 prize purse.

"I was overwhelmed heading through the straight when I skipped to the front," Faehr said. "I had tears in my eyes because I knew I had it.

"I've been to Birdsville five or six times and never won."

Rain washed out Friday's opening day of the Birdsville Races, but the sun shone through on Saturday as more than 3000 punters flooded the racetrack.

'It's been a tough few days but the effort has been well worth it to now," Birdsville Race Club vice president Gary Brook said.

"The weather gods have put on a show today and we're thrilled with the turnout."

Starting as a humble bush meet in 1882, the Birdsville Races have evolved over more than a century to become a bucket-list experience for travellers and racing enthusiasts.

The races will continue on Sunday, with the carnival's postponed Friday six-race program running from noon.

From broke to Birdsville: Faehr speaks of magic moment

By Michael R Williams

"That's where I turned into the straight, and Sacharro had a really good run through transit.

"I was following the favourite, Jochberg, the Pat Richards and Gary Gerans horse, and I knew I was travelling better than them into the turn.

"I started crying. "Birdsville for me is my top and most important win I've ever had."

Longreach-based jockey Robert "Robbie" Faehr has ridden at the Birdsville Cup five times and never come close.

And after spending some time in Gympie last year, he was not making enough money to pay the bills.

He would receive an olive branch from Longreach trainer Richard Simpson.

"Richard offered us a job here and, we brought a couple of horses of our own and we started saving money.

"I get full books every week, and people are so much nicer here.

"We've just been happy since we moved to Longreach."

For the Birdsville Cup, Mr Faehr would receive an offer from Darwin trainer Philip Cole.

"Basically he rang me about two months ago and he's got an apprentice and at that stage, she wasn't going to pass early enough to ride," Mr Faehr said.

"And he asked me if I'll go and he'll give me all the rides and he was taking 11 horses.

"I just had to ask Richard Simpson if I has pretty good form, and [competition in] Darwin is quite strong." could go.

"And that's how I ended up riding of Philip and Rhonda who I know from Adelaide.

After the Betoota Races a week before, Mr Faehr was quietly confident going into Birsdville.

"I rode the horse the week before at Beetoota, and we had a wicked run-I think he [Saccharo] faded a little bit at end of his run," he said.

"I thought I had a real genuine good chance, but with all the rain, I was half thinking we weren't going to race.

"So for the committee, with whatever they did, it was a miracle.

"When you go back through his form, he

Mr Faer thanked Mr Simpson for allowing him to ride with him.

"He's a hard man, but he's fair; he's helped us out so much," he said.

"We came here with nothing, and now we're starting to pay the bills.

"The other person I ride for regularly is Clinton Austin, he's helped me out.

"When I don't have rides for Richard, Clinton Austin fills my book, I won the Alpha Cup for him

"And the one of been riding for him will be aiming for the Longreach Cup.

"We're definitely not leaving here—we're making money."

Annual Flower Beds should be begining to flower.

Gerberas require repotting when their roots begin to fill their pots.

Spring is coming to west

Up until last Friday, I would have said the weather is changing particularly late in the afternoon as it was feeling a little bit warmer.

Then with the rain last Friday it has become cold again, hopefully, the last gasp of Winter.

Even so, I think it is time to begin preparing for Spring as the start of Spring is the time when you should get ready for the coming growing season when the garden is bursting into life with colour and vitality.

Most Annual gardeners should once again be seeing the results of their careful culture of those Annual Flower Beds as those Annuals begin to flower.

From now on, the days will be starting to show a little extra warmth and the signs of Spring should be becoming more and more evident.

September is the time when you should get ready for the coming growing season when the garden is bursting into life with colour and vitality. Most Annual gardeners should once again be seeing the results of their careful culture of those Annual Flower Beds as those Annuals begin to flower.

From now on, the days will be starting to show a little extra warmth and the signs of Spring should be becoming more and more evident.

The end of Winter heralds one of the busiest times for all gardeners, as the work list of what to do becomes more important.

Gerbera enthusiasts will now find the green light is there to start dividing the plants to give that best summer display.

In fact, Gerbera's require repotting every one or two years when the roots begin to fill the pot and become crowded by other plants in the garden.

Importantly, Roses will also need to be pruned now, as leaving them much later than the end of this month would be to the detriment of the plant.

There is still time for Cannas to be lifted, divided and replanted.

cut back, especially if they are not flowering.

This would include plants such as Agapan-

Mulching will help plants tolerate the full blast of our hot summer sun.

Bougainvilleas can be pruned once the flowering has finished.

Roses can also need to be pruned now.

Bark, Straw and even our newspaper have proved to be highly successful in not only controlling the growth of weeds and reducing the amount of water that each plant requires, but also giving the garden that finished effect. The only other important thing to remember with this time of year is, quite often we can experience those strong winds that seem to make almost every plant in the garden want to bend down to the ground.

By reducing the size of the Rose, the plant has growth buds that require sap flow in spring.

The result of this pruning will give the Rose stronger stem production and that means more flowers.

This is a very busy time for Tub Plant Enthusiasts, as it is probably one of the best times of the year to start potting and repotting many of your Tubbed Plants. Plants around the Pool, Pergola, Veranda and even the Hanging Baskets may be looking a little tired after Winter, so this is the perfect time to plant them into a larger tub so that you get the attractive new growth and blooms for Spring.

Pruning of the garden plants will need to commence by this time of the month. Feral plants of the gardens, such as Bougainvilleas, Hibiscus and Calliandras to name a few, can be This week always is a good time to start shaping plants for better spring blooms.

Poinsettias can be pruned hard now, although if you would like to develop your plant into a taller screening plant, simply cut back to three buds on each plant.

For those gardeners with Native Plants, you should be tip-pruning at every opportunity, as it should bring out spectacular Spring flowering displays.

If your Native Plants have become long and spindly, now is the time to be brutal and cut them back to a stump, within 300mm from the ground.

Do not forget to use a tree wound dressing on the freshly cut wounds to prevent Borers from attacking these plants.

There is still time for herbaceous perennials to be lifted, divided and replanted.

thus, Cannas and Spider Lillies.

When replanting, make sure the raised beds are well mulched and the soil used contains at least 50 per cent vegetable matter.

Even some cow manure would help.

A word of warning—when you divide Agapanthus, they may take two to three years to reach flowering maturity again.

Mulching is another important addition to the list of preparations for spring.

Probably the biggest mistake most home gardeners will make is either not mulching their gardens, or if they do, using the wrong type of mulch, both to the detriment of the garden.

Many plants will tolerate the full blast of our hot summer sun, providing their roots are kept cool and moist.

Mulches such as Sugar Cane Mulch, Pine

So keep an eye on any of the shrubs that are starting to produce massive new growth as these may need to be tip-pruned.

In some cases, even having a point to which they can be fixed, either by putting in a few garden stakes or even just having another plant that they can be loosely tied to during that troublesome time.

All in all, September can be a very rewarding time for any gardener, as the results of this work can be seen right through the summer.

Wool trends down

By Australian Wool Network

After two weeks of minimal price movements and an overall unchanged market, the Australian wool market has recorded an overall fall in this series.

Despite the Western region resuming sales after a week's break, the national offering fell.

There was a total of 35,538 bales on offer, 1,893 fewer than the previous week.

Although this smaller offering attracted strong demand, from the opening lot it was apparent that the prices on offer were below last week's levels.

The market continued to slowly fall as the week progressed.

The largest drop in prices was seen in the South for merino fleece types 19.0 microns and finer.

This was reflected in the individual Micron Price Guides (MPGs) in the South, which for 19.0 and finer fell by between 40 and 76 cents.

In the North, which was also a designated Superfine sale, the losses were not as large, with some MPGs recording positive movements.

The movements in these MPGs combined with small overall losses in the skirting, oddment and crossbred sectors resulted in the AWEX Eastern Market Indicator (EMI) dropping by 12 cents for the series.

The EMI closed the week at 1,330 cents. Since the beginning of the new season (1st of July) the EMI has not yet recorded an overall weekly positive movement.

The EMI opened the 2022/23 season at 1,430 cents, over the six sales held so far in the new season the EMI has dropped by a total of 100 cents, a fall of nearly 7 per cent.

When compared to the corresponding sale of the previous series the EMI is trading at a very similar level.

The EMI is currently 2 cents lower, a reduction of only 0.2 per cent.

Quantities for next week are expected to rise.

Currently, there is 39,562 bales rostered on offer in Fremantle, Melbourne and Sydney.

New ownership of Terrick Merinos

By Michael R Williams

Since the change of hands, the first ever sale of rams from the Terrick Merinos stud was held at the Blackall Showgrounds.

Landsdown Pastoral Company owner Christopher Turnbull bought the stud in March and has been impressed with how the merinos have grown.

"The wool's coming along beautifully on those sheep," he said.

"We are very happy with how they sold.

"It's been a great season to grow sheep."

Rick Keogh, former owner of the stud, was looking to downsize and move on from the stud game when Mr Turnbull approached him. "We're looking to in the "In the end he decided to sell to us because he knew we'd continue to sell to western Queensland," Mr Turnbull said.

"And Rick is quite happy with how the stud has changed hands."

The sale saw a high price of $2,700 and an average of just over $1600.

"I don't really go into these sales with too high expectations," Mr Turnbull said.

"But It was a brilliant sale and a great result for ourselves.

"We're in the game of breeding merinos for our clients and at the end of the day they purchase them for what they see them as."

Mr Turnball plans to host the sale of Terrick Merino rams annually, however, is contemplating a change of venue that will still be in Blackall.

Rural and remote health gets helping hand

By Rabobank

Rabobank's Rabo Community Fund has partnered with Heart of Australia on the mobile medical program's mission to deliver specialist healthcare services to rural and remote communities in Queensland.

The specialist agribusiness bank will be providing financial support to the Heart of Australia over the next three years as it delivers specialist clinics including cardiology, endocrinology and gynaecology to rural and remote communities throughout Queensland.

Rabobank client council-manager Yvette Loyson said Heart of Australia's customised trucks bring specialist medical facilities to communities where people may not have the time or opportunity to travel long distances for medical attention.

Ms Loyson said Heart of Australia's mission aligns well with the Rabo Community Fund's key aim of improving rural health.

The world's leading specialist food and agribusiness bank, Rabobank is one of Australia's largest agricultural lenders and a major provider of business and corporate banking services to the country's food and agribusiness sector.

Last year, the bank launched the Rabo Community Fund in Australia and New Zealand to invest in the sustainability and vitality of rural communities.

"As a cooperative, Rabobank has a rich history of community engagement and always looks to make an impact across the rural communities in which our clients live and work," Ms Loyson said.

"The Rabo Community Fund's priorities are led by the bank's farming clients, who are at the heart of their communities, supporting local initiatives with the aim of tangibly and meaningfully contributing to the vibrancy and resilience of rural Australia."

Heart of Australia began in 2014 when founder and cardiologist Dr Rolf Gomes saw the gap in specialist services for those living in rural and remote communities.

Since the first truck was launched in 2014, Heart of Australia has seen over 14,000 patients, now services 33 communities and delivers specialist and radiology services in five trucks.

"We are thrilled to welcome Rabobank to the Heart of Australia partner family to deliver these services in the communities who need them.

"Rabobank is the first partner we have from the finance sector and we look forward to working together to improve the health outcomes for those living in these communities," said Dr Gomes.

Herd rebuilding phase

Low female slaughter and positive bull sale results point towards strengthening the herd rebuild, according to Meat & Livestock Australia (MLA).

The female slaughter rate (FSR) is a technical lead indicator of whether the national herd is operating in a rebuild or liquidation stage. The FSR tracks the number of female cattle processed compared with the total as a percentage.

In the June quarter, albeit slightly higher than the lowest figure in a decade in Q1, the national FSR sat at 44 per cent.

Over the past 12 months, the FSR has averaged 44 per cent nationally which supports MLA's current cattle projections for a 5.6 per cent rise in national numbers in 2022 due to the high retention of females.

Queensland and South Australia are both operating significantly lower than the national average at 35.1 per cent and 34.7 per cent, whilst NSW's FSR in Q2 was 41.7 per cent.

Natural targets

Australian Wool Innovation (AWI) has launched a campaign targeting more environmentally friendly consumers.

The campaign is titled 'Wear Wool, Not Fossil Fuel'.

AWI Chief Executive Officer John Roberts said it has a simple but powerful message.

"It aims to show people the hidden impact of synthetic fibres on the environment and how choosing natural fibres such as wool can be a solution to reducing fashion's impact," he said.

"It features a series of powerful visual messages highlighting the link between fabrics made from synthetic fibres and the crude oil used in its manufacture, with initial media scheduled in Australia, the United States, the United Kingdom and France during September."

Momentum for reform

The National Farmers' Federation has welcomed discussions at the Jobs and Skills Summit but warned without action, there could be dire consequences. NFF President Fiona Simson, who attended the Summit, labelled the event a useful exercise in bringing people together and building momentum for reform.

"As farmers, we've been at the frontline of Australia's workforce challenges for years, and for years we've waited for solutions," she said.

"The Summit helped move that conversation forward and achieved some consensus and momentum.

"But I can tell you as farmers we're a bit sick of talking. It's critically important that we start to turn all that talk into tangible action."

Agday approaching

With just over two months to go until this year's agday, the National Farmers Federation has already begun to build excitement around the event.

NFF President Fiona Simson said this year's theme of "Innovation in Agriculture" is a fantastic opportunity to showcase the new practices and technologies making farmers more sustainable and productive.

"People are always amazed at the science and ingenuity that happens behind the farmgate," she said.

"They often assume that we're just this traditional industry where things change slowly.

"That couldn't be further from the truth! "This AgDay, we're sharing and celebrating the innovation that goes into producing the food and fibre products we enjoy every day."

Urgency for labour across Australia's food supply chain

IN BRIEF

By National Farmers Federation

In the lead-up to the Jobs and Skills Summit, Australia's top peak food industry bodies calculated the food supply chain needed 172,000 skilled and unskilled workers from paddock to plate to continue the effective provision of food to the Australian community.

The Food Supply Chain Alliance says despite food prices and food availability being top of mind for Australian consumers over the past twelve months, as part of 'cost of living 'pressures being experienced nationwide, it does not believe the issues facing the food sector were given due priority or acknowledgement by the Government during the Summit.

The likely result will be the negative impact it will have on Australia's domestic food security. Pickers are needed to harvest horticultural crops, packers in warehouses and truck drivers for food distribution, workers in processing plants, fishers to crew our boats, staff to work in independent supermarkets and convenience stores and critically, over 100,000 staff to support the hospitality industry.

The Alliance said at the outset that this area was one of the few 'cost of living' pressures the Government can influence.

The Alliance believes the food sector, given it provides an essential service to the community, should have been given priority at the Summit with tangible solutions found to be considered a success.

Whilst there are positive announcements overall they have missed the mark and failed to provide immediate relief to the sector such as: Increasing the permanent migration cap from 160,000 to 195,000 is a positive step but this 35,000 increase does not address the immediate shortfall of 172,000 workers needed in the food supply chain.

With over 900,000 unprocessed visas to be processed by government, hiring a 500-person surge workforce will still take over 9 months to reduce the backlog, this is simply too long.

Food supply chain businesses need help now to harvest, pack, ship and distribute food to Australian consumers.

The need for a national food supply chain strategy coupled with a regional housing strategy has not been addressed by the summit.

Given the severity of the challenges facing the sector, the lack of announcements shows the summit has not taken the needs of the engine room of the economy seriously.

Getting pensioners and other welfare recipients into the workplace is important as it simplifies the current temporary visa holder obligations and reduces employment deterrents such as payroll tax.

The 'Food Supply Chain Alliance' represents over 160,000 businesses with a revenue of over $200 billion.

It includes the National Farmers Federation, the Australian Meat Industry Council, Seafood Industry Australia, Independent Food Distributors Australia, AUSVEG, Master Grocers Australia, Restaurant and Catering Industry Association and the Australian Association of Convenience Stores.

Longreach gets through

Longreach Bowls Club hosted the Men's District Pennants last weekend which saw a high standard of bowls and therefore some great games.

This style of competition has three men's fours teams from each town playing against each other simultaneously.

The scores from each game are tallied to become the final score.

After each town plays each other the wins and margins are added up to find the outright winner, who then progresses to the regional playoffs to see who represents our whole zone.

On Saturday morning the first two towns began to play with the three Emerald teams taking on the three teams from Longreach.

All three Emerald teams started well and with the green playing slow because of the rain in the preceding days it took a while for the Longreach boys to find their form. After 21 ends we saw Longreach team 1 lose to their opponents, but Longreach 2 and 3 took good wins to finish ahead with two wins and a margin of 20 shots.

After a snack at lunchtime, the Emerald teams took to the green again this time lining up against the combined towns/teams from Clermont and Aramac.

Again after some fantastic bowls, the Emerald teams proved too strong in two games winning those quite well, but the third game finished with a narrow win of just one shot.

Their final margin was a healthy one.

The next round meant an early start on Sunday morning with the Longreach teams up against Clermont/Aramac combined teams.

The green was not as slow as Saturday morning, and it seemed to suit the Longreach bowlers better as they all started very well.

After they each played their 21 ends it was three wins to Longreach with a margin of 50 shots.

So that was the result which means Longreach now progresses to the next stage which will be played in Mackay on 24 September.

We wish all those that travel all the best as they'll be up against some formidable teams who will be playing those games on carpet, as opposed to our Tiff Dwarf grass.

Basketball as an organised sport is gaining momentum in the central west.

Longreach State School Teacher Shane Sheehan has been workign diligently with other interest groups such as the Central West Aborginal Corp to help create more interest in the sport.

"I've always played Basketball; I've played for over 30 years," he said.

"I noticed there didn't seem to be a lot of organised Basketball.

"I lived in Barcy for a year and they do social kids basketball.

"Through the same organisers, the Central West Aboriginal Corporation, I've started adult social Basketball on Sundays."

Early next term more games will be played among adults, but for now, students are learning new skills after school.

"We've also got funding through Sporting Schools to host an afterschool program with balls and shirts," Mr Sheehan said.

"It's just the Primary School at the moment.

"Tuesday is Prep-Year 3 and Thursday is Year 4-6."

Mr Sheehan said it was good to have a bigger variety of sports in town.

"It's good to have choices; I know when I was young I played Aussie Rules Football, and I noticed when I played Basketball, my football improved," he said.

"It's just ball skills and body movement and contact that you learn.

"At the moment, we're talking with Central West Aboriginal Corporation to get more organised games started.

"That may come in the near future."

Fun in the skill and camaraderie of sport, no pressure

Enjoy your sport!

Sure it is easy for me to say, no one is ever going to pay old Lloydy here $500,000 a season to play footy or $145 million to hit a little white ball around a golf course, but I think that's the case for 99 per cent of us.

How good is it when you see sports people smiling, enjoying themselves, and having fun?

Sure you can be disappointed when you lose, when a close call does not go your way, or when you have done everything correctly right to the point where your bat/racquet/club/body needs to be, but it just does not work out.

I am reminded of this after the Longreach Tennis doubles tournament on the weekend.

While I am only just walking again now, I had a great time.

I partnered with Nicole in the Mixed and Dan in the men's (last names held back to protect reputations), both for the first time in a tournament, and really enjoyed how we clicked, supported each other and enjoyed the ups and downs.

Nicole actually mentioned to me at the end of one match that we really tensed up and did not relax, as a result, we not only did not do well we did not enjoy it!

Now results may not have gone our way, third in mixed and last in the Men's, but we gave a few teams a run for their money, and like any good sportsperson can reel off a number of highlights with various degrees of exaggeration.

All this said we played hard and we were disappointed when we did not play as well as we should have.

But we had fun.

Again I say this is reasonably easy for me to say, make sure you enjoy yourself.

I self-identified my lack of sporting prowess at the age of about nine I think, whereas some take longer to come to this realisation.

I am not saying to rush it, hold on to those dreams, but make sure while you are getting there enjoy the moment, the match, the sport, and make sure you take others along for the ride.

Because for most of us it is only a game.

And if one thing came out of last weekend, Dan and I would make awesome commentators, just ask us.

Win to Geordie and Marlena

By Michael R Williams

Marlena Maier and Geordie Meekin have, for the second year in a row, taken the Longreach Mixed Doubles Tournament.

"I'm glad that we were able to back it up," said Marlena after the couple had left town over Christmas and had not thought to return.

"We didn't think we'd have a chance to defend the title this year, and unfortunately there's a few players away so its not the same as last year, but it was still good to see some numbers," said Geordie.

"We met at the tennis courts so it's a pretty important part of our relationship."

President back for crown

By Michael R Williams

Former Longreach Tennis Club president James Neal has returned to reclaim his crown in the Men's doubles with double winner Geordie Meekin.

"It's good to see they had a tournament again, and it was good to come back and join it," said Mr Neal.

"[Our opponents] were really tough fighters and they played well.

"They were really consistent."

His partner, Geordie Meekin won both the mixed doubles and the men's doubles.

"There were some tough battles today—not too many teams in the comp, but everyone put up a good fight which made it fun," said Mr Meekin.

"Pretty happy with that-we had to fight pretty hard in the Men's game so it was good." See more tennis coverage on page 35
