Hospital tenders out

Tenders have now been called for a combined $7.2 million worth of works at Longreach Hospital.

A new three-chair, nurse-assisted renal dialysis unit will be delivered at a cost of $4.6 million.

The new nurse-assisted haemodialysis unit will be the first for the Central West.

The hospital's pathology and pharmacy departments will also be upgraded at a cost of $2.6 million.

As part of the works, Central West Health is partnering with Pathology Queensland to expand, refurbish and upgrade the existing laboratory within the hospital.

Tenders for the combined works will close on 5 April, with a successful contractor to be announced soon after.

The combined works are expected to be completed by the end of this year.

Littleproud slams Ag Department black hole, saying...

'No excuses'

The Nationals Leader David Littleproud has shirt-fronted the Labor Government for financial woes within the Department of Agriculture, Fisheries and Forestry.

He said only Labor could turn an $88.4 million net profit into a $100 million black hole, in just a matter of months.

"After winning the election, Labor delivered a Budget in October last year, so there can be no excuses," Mr Littleproud said.

"With Labor's upcoming May Budget just around the corner, it's obvious Agriculture Minister Murray Watt has lost control.

"If the government was going to delay the sustainable funding mechanism for biosecurity, they should have addressed any shortfall in the October Budget."

Mr Littleproud added the Department was responsible for some of Australia's most important industries, including farm production and trade, as well as biosecurity.

The Department of Agriculture, Fisheries and Forestry Annual Report for 2021-22 shows a financial performance surplus of $88.4 million.

Mr Littleproud said the Mid-Year Economic and Fiscal Outlook 2021-22 measure also included working towards delivering sustainable funding and investment into the biosecurity system.

The editor's desk

Tourism season is back.

While I do enjoy the rest period in the summer, it feels invigorating to have the west running again.

I have heard a number of newcomers talk about how surprising it is to have something social to do every day.

They don't know what winter is like.

This week saw races, a wellness festival, and pottery... not to mention the regular occurrences of tennis and park run.

And this weekend coming we have the Way Out West Fest.

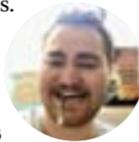

There is so much to be excited about.

While this year looks to be somewhat quieter in terms of numbers compared to 2021/ 2022, I think that's just going to mean more for the rest of us.

Put on your party hats.

It's going to be a bumper year.

Pottery a success

By Michael R Williams and Karen Simmons

Every Tuesday at the Longreach Arts and Crafts Centre on Ibis Street, locals have been discovering just how handy they can be.

Each week the centre hosts different workshops, with a delicious morning tea included.

Classes include handbuilt pottery, botanical fabric painting and felting with wool.

RAPAD Employment Services Queensland (RESQ) help fund and promote the workshops, and encourage job seekers as well as anyone from the community to attend.

Employment Consultant, Cody Daley from

RESQ said the workshops are a great place to socialise, with a number of their mental health clients enjoying the creative outlet.

"The pottery classes have been the most popular," Cody said.

"We are hoping this continues on as it's been so beneficial for attendees."

The Winton community garden continues to grow.

Community garden continues to grow

By Andrew "Juddy" Judd

Last weekend, as part of the Winton Wellness Weekend, saw a number of Health Wellness professionals in their respective fields, invited to share their knowledge and wisdom with members of the Winton Community.

This included Michael Wardle, permaculturalist, who not only lectured on soil productivity but also permaculture and its place within a community garden.

Michael also led participants in the construction of Winton Community Garden's first wicking bed.

This will be used as a trial bed in the production of community food throughout the coming winter months.

Michael's enthusiasm and expertise have revitalised the Community Garden and invigorated the project.

This is the first step to the garden becoming a valuable, sustainable and productive resource for both residents and visitors to Winton to enjoy.

Training for young sheep and wool judges

By Karen Simmons

Calling all eight to 25-year-olds in the Western Region who love to hang out with woolly friends.

The Muttaborra Stock Show is hosting The Bev Rea Sheep and Wool Junior Judging Workshop again these school holidays with registrations closing soon.

The experience of the workshop gives young people a head start for the up-and-coming livestock judging events held during the district show season each year.

The free, all-day event is scheduled for Thursday 13 April with registrations closing Wednesday 5 April.

One of the event organisers Sarah Jane Fysh said last year approximately 27 participants attended and young people travelled far and wide for the experience.

"Children travelled from Winton, Isisford and Corfield," Sarah said.

"It's an opportunity for them to socialise and get together with friends as many are distance education students.

"They learnt about an industry very relevant to their daily life.

"Even for young people who don't have much exposure to life on the land, it's a great opportunity for them to come along and learn about the characteristics of a sheep and gain a better understanding of wool from the sheep's back to the end product the jumper you wear."

The two age group categories are eight to 14 years, and then 15 to 25 years.

The workshop is named in honour of the late district grazier Bev Rea, who saw a gap in the industry training.

She was keen to see young ones be offered the opportunity to learn more about sheep and wool judging and handling.

"The junior stock judging competitions are run at the Longreach, Isisford and Barcaldin shows each year," Sarah added.

"We wanted to encourage more interest in our local workshop and host it before the local show circuit begins, as it may encourage young people to have the confidence and skill set to enter their local show junior judging events.

"If you win locally, it may lead to the participants competing in the junior judging at the Brisbane Exhibition."

This year Greg Hunt from the Australian Wool Network will be instructing children in the wool judging section while Isisford property owner Andrew Hacker will give the youth sheep instructing knowledge.

The family-friendly day is fully catered for, but numbers are limited.

First steps on Treaty path

By Michael R Williams

In what has been described as the first baby steps towards creating treaties for Australian First Nations communities, the Queensland State Government has been visiting communities across the state to begin fielding feedback.

Discussions were held in Longreach where issues around state borders and more were discussed.

"Today we talked about the bill establishing a Path to Treaty institute that will support our First Nations communities to develop treaties," said Mansfield MP Corrine McMillan.

"The bill also discusses, the establishment of a Truth Telling and Healing Inquiry so that we can ensure that all Queenslanders understand our history of colonisation and the impact it had on First Nations peoples."

Ms McMillan said discussions in Longreach were very encouraging going into the Path to Treaty process.

"Today I was encouraged by the knowledge, commitment, and empathy shown by the local people here at Longreach.

"I was very proud of the sentiment shown and I know that they are looking forward to what these negotiations may look like."

Cook MP Cynthia Lui said the process has gone much for the Labor cabinet to consider.

The Path to Treaty Bill has support from both Labor and the Coalition. Nicklin MP Rob Skelton, Mansfield MP Corrine McMillan, Cook MP Cynthia Lui, and Burnett MP Stephen Bennett.

"One of the topics we discussed today was around interstate boundaries and what that may look like during negotiations," she said.

"That will be something that will be needed to be worked out."

Ms McMillan said Longreach residents could look forward to further forums once the bill has been passed.

The forum was well attended.

Wellness Week in Winton

By Michael R Williams

Hosted by Winton's famous comedy team the Crackup Sisters, Wellness Week in Winton went off with a crack.

It was held over two days, with a variety of experts sharing their knowledge on improving community and personal wellness.

Some of the hosts included Psychologist and Nutritionist Linda Brown, movement and play expert Monique de Gooye, and Native Foods expert and Managing Director of Yambangu Aboriginal Culture Heritage and Tourism Association Suzanne Thompson.

"The Crackup Sisters as a company of female acrobats and clowns has always been passionate about our health and wellbeing," said organiser Amanda Pearson.

"Over the years we've searched and found really specialised information and care for our bodies, brains, guts and soils to grow good food.

"We wanted to bring some of these practitioners to Winton to share with us and the community to share knowledge, experience and the latest science as well as the oldest knowledge on wellness, nutrition, medicine and plants."

Ms Pearson said she wanted to find and share practical advice to the greater community.

"We know that the practitioners will not always be here so we wanted practical advice and solutions we can action in our own homes and share with the community," she said.

"And that is exactly what they gave us."

With the addition of the Winton Community Garden last year, there has been an increasing interest in the health and well-being of the Winton community.

"The Winton Community Garden was launched last year as a response to building community spaces and activities to come together and grow: to beautify an area and as a space to share knowledge on growing and eating fresh foods," Ms Pearson said.

"Wellness is something that is important to all of us.

"There has been so much raising of awareness of the importance of mental health.

"We wanted to expand this discussion by highlighting nutrition and mobility of bodies as big players in creating good foundations for a healthy mind which can feed a healthy body.

"It was important to bring nutritionist, naturopath and psychologist Linda Brown to share the latest in research of how our brains function."

Ms Pearson said she and her team of organisers were pleased with how the event turned out.

"It was fabulous," she said.

"A stellar lineup of some of the state's finest in permaculture, nutrition, psychology, native foods and movement.

"We had quite a few participants who thought they would just pop in for one session and found themselves there for the whole weekend."

Ms Pearson said the festival is likely to be held on a bi-annual basis from now on.

"Wellness is an area The Crackup Sisters are passionate about," she said.

"Looking after ourselves and our environment to create awesome experiences for us all."

Littleproud slams black hole of agriculture spending

Leader of The Nationals David Littleproud has shirt-fronted the Labor Government for 'financial woes within the Department of Agriculture, Fisheries and Forestry.

He said only Labor could turn an $88.4 million net profit into a $100 million black hole, in just a matter of months.

"After winning the election, Labor delivered a Budget in October last year, so there can be no excuses," Mr Littleproud said.

"With Labor's upcoming May Budget just around the corner, it's obvious Agriculture Minister Murray Watt has lost control.

"If the government was going to delay the sustainable funding mechanism for biosecurity, they should have addressed any shortfall in the October Budget."

Mr Littleproud added the Department was responsible for some of Australia's most important industries, including farm production and trade, as well as biosecurity.

The Department of Agriculture, Fisheries and Forestry Annual Report for 2021-22 shows a financial performance surplus of $88.4 million.

Mr Littleproud said the Mid-Year Economic and Fiscal Outlook 2021-22 measure also included working towards delivering sustainable funding and investment into the biosecurity system.

"In March 2022, as the former Minister for Agriculture, I agreed to the Department, commencing a public consultation process on sustainable funding and investment for biosecurity," he said.

"In 2021-22 over $1 billion was committed in biosecurity and export services. This was a significant boost to support the Department deliver biosecurity and services while in transition to cost-recovery.

"Prior to this I put in a number of reform measures to improve service delivery for efficiency, including installation of 3D X-rays to handle mail, to better manage the biosecurity risk posed by hitchhiker pests arriving in imported cargo and modernising diagnostic technologies.

"This work just needed to be implemented."

Member for Maranoa MP David Littleproud is unhappy with the Labor Government's handling of the Department of Agriculture, Fisheries, and Forestry.

Sustaining local papers

Local print newspapers like Star News may survive the onslaught of online media.

A national report into local news sustainability is challenging the perception that print newspapers are dead.

The report is calling on governments to revise their advertising rules to help local news providers and better target regional and rural communities.

"Local and regional newspapers continue to play a significant role for local communities," said Star News Group managing director Paul Thomas.

"They provide a voice, an opportunity for informed public debate and hold the powerful to account.

"Star News Group is proud to continue to provide quality local news with balance and fairness but the conditions are tough."

The report Media Innovation and the Civic Future of Australia's Country Press made 22 recommendations.

The finding was the culmination of a three-year Australian Research Council project, led by Deakin University.

Deakin partnered with Country Press Australia, the nation's peak local news lobby, and RMIT University.

Project lead Professor Kristy Hess, of Deakin's School of Communications and Creative Arts, said the project's aim was to examine the local media landscape to identify challenges and opportunities for sustainability and innovation.

"We wanted to examine the challenges facing small-town news providers given the commentary in recent years about the crisis they are facing in Australia and across the world," she said.

This was the first comprehensive report of its kind in Australia and its recommendations provide a blueprint to preserve and grow rural and regional news for future generations.

Country Press Australia president Andrew Manuel said the Media Innovation and the Civic Future of Australia's Country Press report should be seen as a beginning and not an end.

Mr Manuel said the report highlights the essential role local papers play in serving their communities and delivering civic journalism.

"This is arguably the most comprehensive study of our industry ever undertaken and the report stands as a beacon for government, for policy makers and for the community to take the appropriate and necessary actions to ensure newspapers can continue to play such a vital role," he said.

The study began at the start of the Covid-19 pandemic.

The pandemic resulted in the temporary or permanent closure of dozens of local mastheads across Australia and a shift among some to digital-only platforms.

"The first thing we did was conduct a major national survey to find out what people valued about their local mastheads," Professor Hess said.

"We found people in many regional and rural towns and cities were passionate about their local mastheads but rejected an over-reliance on syndicated content, in print and digital, sourced from neighbouring areas or other parts of the country."

Local newspapers like the Longreach Leader may survive yet.

The research team conducted two main national surveys – one with local news audiences and one with those who do not engage with local news.

There were 35 interviews with Australian news editors and proprietors and seven interpretive focus groups with editors, journalists and advertising managers within the Country Press Australia network.

One key finding was the strain on local mastheads hit with lost revenue from local, state and federal government advertising.

Advertising in recent years has prioritised social media and metropolitan news outlets with a larger digital reach.

"Our research found there is this obsession with digital reach," Professor Hess said.

"That's all well and good, but a local masthead, whether in print or online, isn't designed to reach one million people.

"If we use the digital reach metric as an indicator as to which news outlets should get government advertising, these independent regional and rural outlets are going to lose out every time.

The report supports a recent Parliamentary Inquiry recommendation that stipulates 20 per cent of all Federal Government advertising expenditure be directed to regional and rural news organisations.

"Communities without a newspaper rarely have a platform that enables them to be fully informed," Mr Thomas said.

"They no longer have professionally trained journalists providing balance and seeking out the details.

"They become reliant on social media which has no balance, and most often simply coughs up someone else's bias."

Data from the study also showed government funding schemes for local news outlets were often tied to digital innovation.

Funding is often given to buy drones and other technologies.

The report describes a 'digital shiny things bias' towards digital innovation at the expense of supporting initiatives that may be most beneficial to rural and regional audiences.

A greater appreciation for place-based public interest journalism and the need for collaboration among publishers were other key findings.

While what local news providers needed was financial support to upgrade print infrastructure or to hire more staff.

Professor Hess said print is not dead for many regional and rural communities.

"We need to remember there is a digital divide in Australia that means some communities still struggle with poor-quality and unreliable Internet connections.

"Some segments of the community, including older citizens, find it difficult to use newer technologies.

"Younger audiences also like the look of a printed newspaper."

The report also recommends better incentives, including pay, to attract seasoned reporters to the regions. Governments are also urged to provide seed funding for journalist-led news start-ups to counteract local "news deserts" developing in some parts of Australia.

"Our research shows people in these communities want more local news content, including stories on locals' achievements, successes and milestones.

"They also want news on local events and more investigative-type pieces."

Mr Manuel noted that regional newspapers are unique in their ability to give readers an insight into their close community.

"Our members continue to provide the local and civic news that readers crave more than ever, often as the only local media outlet serving a particular region," he said.

"Coming out of the pandemic, many publishers have reported a strong revival in their readership, underpinned by a focus on hyper-local and unique news that has been a common denominator of country papers since their inception."

The research also found there is more capacity for regional and rural news providers to develop collaborative advocacy and solutions-style reporting campaigns that address important rural and regional issues that span multiple communities.

Mr Thomas said the Victorian State Government is very supportive of the industry, ensuring important government communications are "provided to local communities through the local newspapers".

However he stipulates that this dedication is not reflected in the Federal Government, who place their announcements solely online.

"Government messages can easily be misconstrued online or end up next to inappropriate material," he said.

"We call on the Federal Government to ensure that they provide information to local communities across appropriate platforms and commit to the recommendations of this report by Deakin."

The report was launched at a national event in Melbourne on 23 March.

Meet QCWA's Fiona Owens

By Suzie van Laarhoven

Fiona Owens has been a QCWA Country Kitchens facilitator for five years now, joining the health promotion program back in 2017.

"I registered to learn more about healthy eating and nutrition myself, with the goal to then be able to pass on the knowledge in my community," said Fiona.

Fiona has worked to form partnerships with a range of organisations and groups in Longreach, such as schools, the local library, and the council.

Through these partnerships, she has facilitated a number of activities, including showcase displays at community events, and cooking workshops.

As a Tour Guide for the School of Distance Education in Longreach, Fiona is passionate about maximising the impact of her Country Kitchens activities.

"Earlier this year, I delivered two hands-on nutrition workshops with a total of 30 students as part of the Longreach School of Distance Education's cluster week," said Fiona

"The students enjoyed learning about the 5 key messages, as well as how to make healthy sausage rolls and apple crumble.

Longreach has a Mums and Bubs group organised through the local Council.

The group meet weekly in the library, so Fiona created a wonderful and informative display about healthy lunchboxes, in the library where the group meet.

"I really like doing showcase displays and including taste testing and recipe cards from the Country Kitchens recipe bank," said Fiona

In May last year, Fiona organised another showcase for the Queensland Chamber Orchestra's Camerata event.

Outside of Country Kitchens, Fiona is an

"Everyone should get involved with Country Kitchens as it is a great way to learn skills for a healthier lifestyle, and to positively influence the health of others in your community."

A new three-chair, nurse-assisted renal dialysis unit will be delivered at Longreach Hospital - tenders are now open for the works. Picture: SUPPLIED

Tenders call

Tenders have now been called for a combined $7.2 million worth of works at Longreach Hospital.

A new three-chair, nurse-assisted renal dialysis unit will be delivered at a cost of $4.6 million.

The new nurse-assisted haemodialysis unit will be the first for the Central West.

The hospital's pathology and pharmacy departments will also be upgraded at a cost of $2.6 million.

As part of the works, Central West Health is partnering with Pathology Queensland to expand, refurbish and upgrade the existing laboratory within the hospital.

The existing pharmacy department will also be upgraded and expanded.

The new dialysis unit will be located on the ground floor of the South Wing of Longreach Hospital, close to the Allied Health service.

Tenders for the combined works will close on 5 April, with a successful contractor to be announced soon after.

The combined works are expected to be completed by the end of this year.

The $7.2 million worth of works at Longreach Hospital is part of our investment of around $28 million in upgrades and refurbishments to the hospital since 2017.

Central West Hospital and Health Service Chief Executive Anthony West said the development of a full nurse-assisted haemodialysis unit for Longreach will prove to be a major improvement in patients' lives.

"An additional three specialised nurses and an administration officer will be recruited to support the new dialysis unit," Mr West said.

"Nurse-assisted dialysis is a complex service to deliver, requiring access to specialist medical and allied health support and on-site nursing staff.

"For this reason, the Central Queensland Kidney Service at Rockhampton has partnered with Central West Health to support the safe provision of dialysis care at Longreach."

Minister for Health and Ambulance Services the Honourable Yvette D'Ath said the upgrading and refurbishment works at Longreach Hospital ensure healthcare delivery in a facility equipped for the 21st century.

"This is an investment that will benefit Central West residents for years to come," Minister D'Ath said.

"Right across the state, we are building new health infrastructure, so our dedicated health staff have the most modern facilities from which to deliver their services.

"Over the next seven years, for instance, the Palaszczuk Government is investing more than $1 billion to replace ageing infrastructure across rural and remote areas.

"Over the past three years, the Palaszczuk Government has invested more than $66 million in additional operational funding to support better access to kidney healthcare services, particularly in regional and remote areas.

"This is allowing care to be delivered closer to home for many people in regional, rural and remote areas of Queensland.

"I know it is tough on the people who have to travel to receive dialysis, as well as for their families.

"This is about providing better care closer to home for Queenslanders, no matter where they live."

The initial funding for the Longreach Hospital dialysis unit was announced by the Palaszczuk Government as part of a statewide allocation for the expansion of regional, rural and remote dialysis services in October 2020.

The latest $7.2 million worth of works at Longreach Hospital brings to about $28 million the total amount invested in upgrades and refurbishments to the hospital since 2017.

Under this Palaszczuk Government commitment, new dialysis units have already been opened at Ingham and Charters Towers, together with an expansion of the existing dialysis units in Bowen and Cooktown.

New dialysis units are also in progress for Proserpine, Kowanyama and Yeppoon.

Previous upgrade and refurbishment works at Longreach Hospital have already delivered:

- A new and expanded maternity unit.
- A new day surgery unit.
- A new medical imaging department that includes the Central West's first CT scanner.
- Upgraded emergency department.
- New air-conditioning system.
- Upgraded electrical systems.
- Extensive upgrades to the nurse call and medical gases systems.

Renewable project closer

The approval of the Development Application for the Barcaldine Renewable Energy Zone marks a major milestone for this game-changing economic development opportunity.

Manufacturing in Australia has declined substantially, chiefly due to energy costs domestically.

The opportunity to re-energise manufacturing and intensive food production right here in Western Queensland will be realised as this project continues to mature, with a final funding decision from the state for infrastructure development now the last key remaining item before on-ground works commences and operations begin.

For years we have seen the construction of solar farms that provide little to no ongoing or long-term employment within the region (or anywhere for that matter).

This concept will see a combination of wind and solar power for multiple different businesses that in turn will provide a waste product as part of their operating methodology that will be a valuable input for another business within the BREZ precinct.

Lowering the cost of production and locating the BREZ at the intersection of two major transport/freight and logistical routes have been key elements attracting already established and viable businesses to consider expanding or moving their base to Barcaldine.

The compounding effect of the direct employment opportunities (which span the employment and skills spectrum) will be the expansion of existing local businesses' footprints and the introduction of other support businesses.

School leavers, trade and university graduates, locals, intra and interstate, and even foreign workers will be attracted to remain or move to the region with a solid prospect of permanent, long-term employment in a sector immune from the changes and negative impacts being forecast around fossil fuel use or extraction; presenting not only an economic diversity for the region but safeguarding its future.

Housing will be a significant issue to be addressed as the project develops, council has already commenced developing strategies to allow for the infill of our towns before new developments are required and last year approved a new planning scheme which will allow for a more streamlined and attractive development process.

In the shadow of hawks as wet season brings out birds

One of the perks of a wet season is the return of bird life.

I've spotted two entirely new (to me) species, one of which I've yet to identify with my bird book.

The other is a sacred kingfisher.

Some have remained around the house yards all through the drought, like magpies and willy wagtails, but in increasing numbers.

Others have come and gone in migrating waves since last year, but a few of their numbers have decided to stay put, for the time being anyway.

We have a couple of dozen brolgas currently making themselves at home, appropriately, in our home paddock.

They are quite a sight to behold when they gather in flight.

Another bird species which gathers im-

ILFRACOMBE INKLINGS

JOANNE ROBERTSON

pressively in flight is the bustard, commonly known around here as the bush turkey.

One species which gathers ominously is crows. Whoever came up with the epithet murder of crows knew a thing or two about them, because they can be bringers of death.

I keep my eyes peeled when crows gather, to see if they've spotted an animal in strife.

Along with the crows are hawks, which dance around the trees the crows gather in.

I don't really know the relationship between the two, but I like to think the hawks are letting the crows know they are there.

And the hawks are certainly there, in ever-increasing numbers.

There are many different names for a group of hawks, one being a kettle of hawks, which I suspect comes from the plume of steam rising from a kettle of boiling water. Hawks seem to fly in a similar pattern to water vapour when they gather in numbers.

My favourite name is a swirl of hawks.

That's what they were doing the other day, as I drove home, swirling above my head.

There was a couple of dozen or so when I picked up my camera and jumped out of the car, hoping to catch the whole kettle.

Suddenly, more rose from the trees in the creek, until there were dozens and dozens of hawks, so many I had no hope of counting them.

As impressive as brolgas and turkeys are, they don't have a patch on hawks when they get together.

Then I noticed their shadows dancing on the ground all around me.

In the setting sun, they were elongated but still retained the recognisable silhouette of a hawk. It seemed to double the numbers and make me feel truly surrounded since they were flying above and below me, kind of like a disco ball throws light on walls, floors and ceilings during a dance.

I have to say, it's one of the coolest things I've ever seen.

The better half calls it a bush disco, and it's a wondrous sight to behold, seeing the sky and ground filled with these glorious birds.

I just hope they have their eyes on the grasshoppers, but that's a story for another day.

The Last of Us is bold and biting - you won't regret it

MOVIE REVIEW

HAMISH HART

In 2013, Naughty Dog Studios released the critically-acclaimed video game The Last of Us.

One decade later, the creative mind behind PlayStation's masterpiece Neil Druckmann helps lead the way to adapt the game into a television series.

After a global pandemic causes civilisation to crumble, humanity is left to survive against fungal-infected humans.

The Last of Us primarily follows toughened family man Joel Miller (Pedro Pascal) and 14-year-old Ellie Williams (Bella Ramsey) who is Joel's 'protectee' as she may just be humanity's last hope to end this 20-year-old pandemic once and for all.

A vocal minority have criticised the show for making select changes to characters and the story as a whole; and while there are certainly differences between the game and show, there's no denying each adaptation accurately portrays the sheer despair and anguish of living in a post-apocalyptic world.

"If there's a phrase I would use to describe the show, it would be "avant-garde," - Hamish Hart.

Each of the nine episodes is well-paced and treats the monsters as giant hurdles for the characters to overcome, saving them as special attractions to keep tensions high.

At the end of the day, the show's greatest achievement is the relationships forged from episode to episode—especially the main one moulded between Joel and Ellie.

Pedro Pascal and Bella Ramsey breathe new life into Joel and Ellie, embodying the character's personalities and motivations previously brought to life by their immaculate video game counterparts Troy Baker and Ashley Johnson; two esteemed actors who pop up in the show not just as one-off cameos, but as important characters who affect Joel and Ellie's journey for better and worse.

Pascal's grizzly performance is a feat in how to portray a hardened survivor, rarely expressing the positive side of himself which makes the development of his character all the more satisfying as he learns to open up to himself and others, particularly Ellie who grows the most throughout the journey.

She begins the series as a loner who refuses to open up to others before meeting Joel, a similarly-enclosed survivor who also dealt with loss as they learn to reconnect with humanity by protecting and bonding with each other in a manner that feels genuine by virtue of the chemistry between Pascal and Ramsey.

If there's a phrase I would use to describe the show, it would be "avant-garde".

The Last of Us' cutting-edge adapted screenplay allows the series to explore a wide variety of stories in this post-apocalyptic world.

Episodes like "When You're Lost in the Darkness," "Long, Long Time" and "When We Are in Need" accentuate the show's gritty and eerie setting, focusing on the harsh reality by blending it with a calamitous future many dread.

The show may not be on par with the video game, but at the end of the day, you can't truly compare the two mediums due to the interactive experience of video games.

The Last of Us stands as my favourite series of 2023 and with a second season green light for 2025, I'd highly recommend jumping on the bandwagon before the hype dies out.

Trust me, you won't regret it.

A whole lot of CWA service

By Suzie C McDarra

Five Country Women's Association (CWA) Central West Divisional members were recognised for 60 or 50 years of service last Saturday.

Sixteen members were in attendance in person and online from branches in Longreach, Morella, Barcaldine, Blackall, Alpha and Muttaborra.

Gwen Rogers from the Longreach branch has been a member of Silso and Longreach branches for over 60 years.

At the branch level, Gwen has been president, vice president, secretary, international officer and a convenor for various competitions.

For the CW Division, she has been president, vice president and secretary.

Joyce Rogers has been a member of Silso, Longreach, Ilfracombe and Morella branches.

In the branch, Joyce has been president, secretary, treasurer and international officer.

For Division she has been president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and convenor of competitions.

For the state, Joyce was vice president of the central region.

Alison McNall, currently divisional treasurer, from the Blackall branch has been a member of Richmond, Muttaborra and Blackall branches for over 50 years.

At branch level, she was president, secretary, treasurer and hall convenor.

Alison became the bus driver to take members to mobile meetings many years ago.

Of all her roles, Alison said she's "happiest in the kitchen".

As a member for 50 years, Jane Rogerson started at the Silso branch and moved to the Morella branch.

She has been a treasurer and a convenor for various competitions.

Dawn Crawley from Barcaldine was unable to attend to receive her badge recognising 60 years of service.

Whilst Dawn didn't hold any positions, she supported members and all those in executive positions over the many years.

CWA State President Sheila Campbell said it was a pleasure to award the certificates and pins.

"It's the members who make this association," Mrs Campbell said.

"It's you who do all the work and without members, we wouldn't be able to do what we do.

"We do a damn site more than make scones," she laughed.

"Our real work is to lobby government – and because of our longevity, they listen to us.

"The reason you wear a seatbelt and are kept alert by the rumble strips on the side of the road whilst driving—they're because of the CWA.

"The reason we don't shoot koalas anymore is because of the CWA because up until 1932, koalas could be shot.

"So that's how far we go back when it comes to advocacy.

"Things we're advocating, for now, include staff-resident ratios in aged care centres.

"We're talking to health departments about hospitals which no longer have maternity wards."

Mrs Campbell said the QCWA needs younger women to continue the legacy we've established over 100 years since being founded by Ruth Fairfax.

"We are 101 this year, but we're celebrating the centenary over two years to allow celebrations in all 20 state divisions.

"The essence of the QCWA is our role in providing a safe place for women to meet."

Due to a lack of incoming younger members, the Jericho branch held its final meeting in February and Aramac has also closed its branch in recent years.

"We welcome new members – we need new members and their ideas, or these branches face the same fate as Alpha and Aramac.

Monthly, Longreach also hosts the QCWA markets on the second Saturday of each month, commencing on Saturday, April 1 in Qantas Park from 8.30 am – 12 noon.

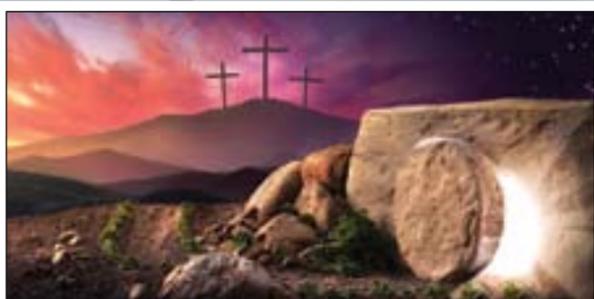

Events to look forward to this year include the 240km Longreach to Winton Endurance Ride on July 29-30 are major fundraisers this year to celebrate 100 years of QCWA.

Longreach branch is responsible for the presentation dinner on Sunday, July 30 and they need manpower to help with the setup and serving and bar.

Any community groups, individual volunteers and property owners interested in being involved in the event with various jobs including checkpoints, supplying water and food and looking after riders are welcome to message the Longreach-Winton Centenary Endurance Ride page on Facebook, email laura.axsentieff@y7mail.com or discover more at qldendurance.asn.au/

Good News

Goodbye to Muttaborra

On Sunday, 29 January, parishioners and friends gathered with Bishop Michael and Fr Shaiju Lookose to celebrate Mass for the final time at St Joseph's Catholic Church, Muttaborra.

The mood was reflective, as people remembered times past at the church, and other places and times in their faith journey.

The local QCWA hosted a lovely morning tea afterwards, allowing the memories to continue flowing in air-conditioned comfort.

The history of the Catholic Church in Muttaborra is a long and at times difficult one. In 1877 (before the Diocese of Rockhampton existed), Fr James Cumberford was appointed to be in charge of the Western District – travelling on his faithful horse from Westwood out to Arrihah, and up to Hughenden in the North.

Administratively, Muttaborra was part of the Barcaldine Parish established in 1888, before joining the Longreach Parish when it was established in 1893.

Then in 1934 it passed back to the Barcaldine Parish, which likely necessitated the change of name from St John's to St Joseph's. In 1950 Muttaborra and Aramac formed their own Parish.

July 9, 1882, marks the first recorded Catholic marriage, officiated by Fr Cumberford at the Muttaborra Court House.

Religious services were held at the Court House until 1894, when on the 2nd September the first Catholic Church was officially opened by Fr Hanley, the first Parish Priest of Longreach.

On the afternoon of 20 January, 1943, a fierce storm hit Muttaborra, throwing the Celebration of Final Mass at St Joseph's Catholic Church, Muttaborra, with Bishop McCarthy.

Catholic Church off its stumps and destroying it.

There are reports of over three inches (75mm) of rain falling within 30 minutes, and large hail to accompany the wild winds and driving rain.

Once repaired, the RSL Memorial Hall gave the Catholic Church free use of their building once a month for church services until completion of the current church building in September 1948.

It is hoped that this building will continue to be a place of life and love, providing a much needed home or other suitable use for someone in the township.

School Savvy CQ back to school pop-up shops opened across eight locations in January.

School Savvy pop-up shops return for new year

CatholicCare's annual back-to-school initiative that assists families with the rising cost and stress of getting students ready for the new school year has again witnessed huge demand in 2023.

Over 4000 people walked through the doors of a School Savvy CQ back to school pop-up shop in January, which opened across eight locations within the Central Queensland Region.

Each year, School Savvy pop-up shops offer quality second hand uniforms and essential booklist stationery supplies for as little as $1 to students in the Rockhampton, Yeppoon, Gracemere, Mount Morgan, Bundaberg, Gin Gin, Childers and Mackay areas.

Some of the pop-up shops also provide students with free basic haircuts.

CatholicCare director Robert Sims said that the number of people who accessed the service last month reflected the tough financial pressures that many families are facing.

"The level of demand that we saw really reinforces why School Savvy is so needed in our community."

With housing crises and the rising cost of living heavily impacting families throughout 2022, Mr Sims said that it was no wonder that people were still feeling the pinch.

School Savvy pop-up shops will be back again in January 2024 and the team at CatholicCare already have preparations well underway.

If you would like to learn more or enquire about becoming a business supporter, visit schoolsavvyqc.com or find School Savvy CQ on Facebook.

Race day with no horses

Springsure's St Patrick's Day Race Club celebrated its 70th annual race meeting on 11 March – without any horses!

Due to significant rainfall in the days preceding the event, the track was deemed unfit for racing but a phantom meeting still went ahead.

More than 600 patrons enjoyed a great day of fun, music and fashions, including a hotly-contested separate category representing a 1950s' ensemble.

The St Patrick's Day Race Club held its first race meeting in 1950 after Fr McCarthy, Derm O'Donohue, Frank Priddle and Henry Dendle designed the event to boost the funds of the parish.

According to local legend, it was all worked out on the bonnet of a car.

For many years, a St Patrick's Day Ball was held on the evening before the races and St Patrick's Day Concerts were also conducted by the Sisters of Mercy with the children from the school.

Today, the money raised from the race meeting still supports Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Parish and Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Catholic School, along with other local charities.

The efforts of all volunteers from the parish and school are sincerely appreciated for their hard work before, during and after the event.

From these humble beginnings, the race meeting has become a highlight of the Springsure social calendar drawing patrons and punters from throughout the Central Highlands and beyond.

Under Racing Queensland regulations another race meeting is required to be held – with horses this time, we expect – on Sunday, 18 June, but we anticipate it will be a much quieter affair.

Springsure's St Patrick's Day Race Club cuts the anniversary cake with president Terry Hoare and Fr Francois.

CATHOLIC DIOCESE OF ROCKHAMPTON

A community of believers witnessing the good news of the Kingdom

Bishop's Easter message

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ,

Our Easter celebrations are a journey over several days, but it is one celebration which we are all invited to participate fully in and experience as community gathered.

I invite you to take the time to join your local community this coming Easter.

The entrance antiphon for the Mass of the Lord's Supper says – "We should glory in the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, in who is our salvation, life and resurrection, through whom we are saved and delivered."

This sums up our Easter journey with Christ, the Sacred Paschal Triduum.

We begin on Holy Thursday with the Mass of the Lord's Supper, where we are given the wonderful gift of the Eucharist; the centre of our faith and what we gather at table for each week when follow Christ's command to "Do this in memory of me".

We then follow Christ on his difficult journey to the cross on Good Friday for the celebration of the Passion of the Lord.

We sit with Mary in her sorrow, watching everything unfold, waiting, seeing Jesus give all to die for us. Then we wait.

We wait for the light of Jesus resurrected to burst forth at the Easter Vigil.

We celebrate with great joy our salvation in Christ, and we welcome our new members into the Church through the Sacraments.

This, my people, is the core of our faith.

However, Easter does not end there.

We continue to celebrate the Easter season for the following six weeks, through to Pentecost and the coming of the Holy Spirit anew.

Our Diocese will be holding a celebration for everyone across the Diocese to join on the Pentecost weekend.

I invite you to join us, and you can find further information in parish bulletins and Diocesan communications.

May you experience all of God's blessings this Easter.

Yours sincerely,

Most Rev Michael McCarthy

Buyers' advocate Andrew Winter returns with a new season of Selling Houses Australia

*Do you have an event coming up?
We want to know!*

Send the details to editorial@leadertoday.com.au and we'll publish it in our weekly Events Calendar.

Tricks of the trade

Filming together in a pandemic brought Selling Houses Australia presenters Andrew Winter, Dennis Scott and Wendy Moore closer than they ever expected. Ahead of the series' 15th season, buyers' advocate Winter and landscaper Scott share their unique bond with Siobhan Duck

FIFTEEN years at the helm of Selling Houses Australia has enabled Andrew Winter to see just how people around the country really live. Last year was the first time he got the very same intimate insight into his co-star's living habits.

Soon after landscaper Dennis Scott and interior designer Wendy Moore joined the popular Foxtel series – stepping into the void left by outgoing co-hosts Shayna Blaze and Charlie Albone – and production was upended by Covid-19.

Queenslanders Winter and Scott found themselves marooned in Sydney for almost six months when the borders to their home state slammed shut. While stuck at the same hotel, Winter and Scott began taking daily strolls together to get some respite from staring at the walls of their respective rooms.

"Dennis taught me to walk again," Winter laughs of his daily sojourns with the former NRL star.

"It sounds crazy, but we there wasn't a lot we could do and he's a tall ex-footballer so, of course, when he walks it's fast!

"He said: 'We should walk each day' and I said: 'Okay'.

"The first few days I had no activewear with me, so I was just in my jeans, an overcoat and some boots. It was all a bit hilarious, really. I was literally having to do two steps to his one.

"But by the end of it, I was keeping up with him and I've kept walking as well.

"So, that was something for me that came out of it."

In addition to his walks with Winter, Scott regularly went running with Sydneysider Moore. While pounding the pavement, the two newcomers forged a special bond that has translated into a happy partnership on their TV renovation projects.

Winter believes the pandemic fast-tracked the getting-to-know-you period for the entire cast.

"We sort of crammed in probably five years' worth of work connections in a two-to-three-month period," he laughs.

"We saw that much of each other."

Winter and Scott became so at ease in each other's company after their Sydney experience, that once they were finally permitted back into Queensland, they elected to quarantine together.

"Andrew's family quite graciously moved out of the house so we could stay there [to quarantine] for two weeks," Scott says.

"And while I was living there, I was essentially Andrew's full-time chef/gardener/maintenance man. Now, there's not a lot I don't know about Andrew. I know all about who his best mates were at school in England. And he knows all about me."

As housemates, Scott and Winter were a bit like TV's Odd Couple.

"Or maybe more like the Two Grumpy Men," Scott jokes.

"It's almost like opposites attract. Andrew has a very sarcastic sense of humour and I quite like a bit of sarcasm as well.

"He loves his British dramas. I hadn't seen too many British crime dramas so we sat and watched a fair bit of that stuff [while I was staying at his place on the Gold Coast].

"It was quite interesting because when we were trapped in Sydney,

I went over to Andrew's apartment or the NRL Grand Final and lo and behold, halfway through it, Andrew actually started to ask me questions about the football and he is the least sporty person going around."

In addition to discovering his sportier side under Scott's influence, Winter also used his time in isolation to update his real estate licence so he can now work as a buyer's advocate.

Having begun working as an agent in his native England, Winter says he wanted to get back in the game after a 14-year absence.

"I missed it," he says, before adding that he is uniquely qualified to buy houses for people.

"I have been going into people's homes since the age of 17. And I

WE SORT OF CRAMMED IN PROBABLY FIVE YEARS'
WORTH OF WORK CONNECTIONS IN A TWO-TO-THREE-MONTH PERIOD.
WE SAW THAT MUCH OF EACH OTHER

don't just go into one room I go around into every room. I have been through tens of thousands of houses. So, I've got a very interesting perspective. I challenge people to find someone who has been in as many homes."

Now that he is arguably Australia's best known buyers' advocate, that doesn't mean we will soon be seeing Winter joining the famous throng haggling for houses on The Block.

"I would never let any buyer of mine buy any Block house ever for those inflated prices," he laughs.

"I guarantee that! Now, if one of the buyers really wanted one – not that there seems to be many genuine buyers any more [on The Block] – I would wait a couple of years and then buy it for a knock-down price."

Not that Winter is completely opposed to Nine's juggernaut renovation series.

"I think the concept is great," he enthuses of The Block.

"I just wish they'd do some normal houses. I think this is why Australians have connected with Selling Houses. Sure we have done some multi-million-dollar homes over the years, some really beautiful homes with big price tags. We do one of those per season, well, not every season."

Instead, Winter says, Selling Houses Australia offers viewers a realistic approach to renovation and the property market, which, in these tough times, can be a greater salve than looking at the jaw-dropping makeovers of high-end homes, because they are attainable.

Once again this season, the team will renovate houses that are languishing on the market, in hopes of attracting buyers. Working to an often-tight budget, Moore and Scott showcase how something as simple as a fresh coat of paint or newly laid turf can breathe new life into a property.

"Contrary to what people believe, not everybody lives in a three-to-four-million-plus home and that [price tag] tends to be the sort of bare minimum for most of these [other real estate] shows," Winter says.

"Sometimes we just want inspiration for our home, not for luxury living."

Movie Guide

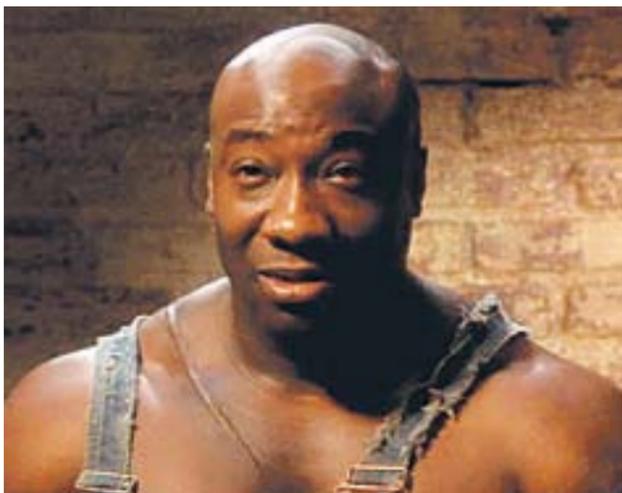

Blast from the past: Gal Gadot ushers in a new era of Wonder Woman.

PICK OF THE WEEK

Saturday
WONDER WOMAN
Nine, 8.30pm, M (2017)

Directed by Patty Jenkins, who helmed the Oscar-winning Monster (2003), Wonder Woman is a compelling and stunningly shot exploration of the origins of the female superhero. Gal Gadot (Fast & Furious) commands the screen as the titular character, with a welcome emphasis on her strength and conviction, rather than her beauty. Set during World War I, Gadot is in her element as the fierce warrior trying to stop a global threat, while also discovering her true destiny. It's a fun, thoughtful, passionate and often disarmingly humorous blockbuster that features spectacular battle sequences and more than a nod to female empowerment. Chris Pine and Robin Wright also have starring roles. ★★★★★

THE GREEN MILE
Seven, Friday, 8.30pm, MA15+ (1999)

Director Frank Darabont (The Shawshank Redemption) takes on another Stephen King story with this fulsome but laboured drama with a supernatural bent. It follows the relationships and various strange happenings between the guards and inmates of a death-row prison wing in Georgia in 1935. Events are told in flashback from the point of view of a retired prison guard (Tom Hanks), mostly concerning a towering Boo Radley-like convict (Michael Clarke Duncan, pictured). ★★★★★

THE FATHER
SBS World Movies, Friday, 8.30pm, M (2020)

Veteran actor Anthony Hopkins puts on a masterclass in his Academy Award-winning role as Anthony, a Welsh octogenarian losing his grip on reality as he grapples with dementia. Olivia Colman (pictured, The Crown) is likewise remarkable as Anne, the daughter who is trying her best to provide care for Anthony despite his insistence he needs none. First-time director Florian Zeller, who co-wrote the screenplay, has crafted an incredibly affecting and profoundly moving portrayal. ★★★★★

THE PERSONAL HISTORY OF DAVID COPPERFIELD
10 Shake, Saturday, 7.30pm, PG (2019)

Charles Dickens' tale of self-discovery is given a vibrant, postmodern retelling by director and writer Armando Iannucci (Veep). Starring Dev Patel (pictured), along with a star-studded cast including Hugh Laurie, Tilda Swinton and Peter Capaldi, it's a celebration of creativity, imagination and eccentricity that remains loyal to Dickens' autobiographical tome, with the tale split up into chapters as the man himself narrates his life, from child labourer to celebrated author. ★★★★★

OCEAN'S ELEVEN
9Go!, Sunday, 7pm, PG (2001)

This quality crime caper sees George Clooney in the role of Danny Ocean, a suave thief who heads an 11-strong cadre of cons who conspire to swipe $160 million from three Las Vegas casinos. With Brad Pitt, Matt Damon, Don Cheadle and Julia Roberts (pictured with Clooney and Pitt) in on the game, Steven Soderbergh's fail-safe remake of the 1960 heist flick should be enjoyed for what it is: a showcase of cool actors in a vivid setting, under the guidance of a flattering director. ★★★★★

STAR TREK BEYOND
10 Shake, Monday, 8.30pm, M (2016)

The third Star Trek outing since the reboot sees Justin Lin replace J.J. Abrams in the director's chair. It also sees the crew of the USS Enterprise exploring the farthest depths of space, beyond where anyone has been before. It's the kind of place where, when something goes wrong it's up to you to get yourself out of trouble, as no one else is around to help. Chris Pine, Zachary Quinto (pictured) et al are back for another go around with Idris Elba as the villain of the piece. ★★★★★

ACE VENTURA: PET DETECTIVE
9Go!, Tuesday, 7.30pm, M (1994)

"What the ...?" was the reaction of the witnesses to Jim Carrey's (pictured) rambunctious, full-blooded, and timely introduction to the big screen; his pet detective character disturbing, puzzling and entertaining audiences as he snuffs out the conspirators involved in stealing the Miami Dolphins mascot – yes, an actual bottlenose. Carrey's Rubik's cube facial posturings and puerile gags offset a half-wit plotline with uneven results, but when it's funny, it's kind of ... really funny. ★★★★★

The Guide

PICK OF THE WEEK

I'M A CELEBRITY... GET ME OUT OF HERE!
10, Sunday, 7.30pm

Another year, another band of familiar (and not-so-familiar) "celebrities" are deposited into the jungle campsite. If you've managed to steer clear of the rumour mill about who will end up in the wilderness, tonight's premiere will be a pleasant surprise. This year, the cast and crew have returned to the wilds of Africa, so expect tiger puns and elephant jokes galore from seasoned hosts Julia Morris and Dr Chris Brown. Last season's winner, radio star Dylan Lewis, donated his hefty $100,000 to charity Lifeline. Set to feature an outspoken radio host and a sporting legend, viewers can feel good that this palaver is all for a worthy cause.

Wild things:
Dr Chris Brown and Julia Morris return to South Africa for I'm a Celebrity... Get Me Out of Here!

UNDER THE VINES
ABC TV, Saturday, 8.20pm

Since the pandemic, daydreaming about uprooting to the country to eke out an idyllic life on a vineyard has become a mainstream folly. In this charming and frothy Kiwi drama, Rebecca Gibney (pictured, Packed to the Rafters) and Charles Edwards (Downton Abbey) play a mismatched pair of strangers who somehow inherited a winery in New Zealand together. Of course, it isn't all it's cracked up to be. As we near the end of this first season, Daisy and Louis are starting to warm to each other, with Gibney and Edwards exuding a palpable chemistry. Tonight, Daisy is over the moon about Griffin (Dean O'Gorman) visiting, but the mood is soured by Louis' wallowing following his marriage break-up.

MARRIED AT FIRST SIGHT

Nine, Monday, 7.30pm

If you've studiously tuned in for the past 10 seasons of unwavering drama, betrayal, ferocious flirting and bad behaviour, you know what you're in for with tonight's finale reunion special: more drama, with a sly little reveal or surprise. Tuning in for this emotional wreckage season in and season out is undoubtedly an entertaining guilty pleasure: just make sure you take a moment to wash away the indiscretions and tune back into real (unscripted) life afterwards. The tumultuous couples face experts John Aiken, Mel Schilling and clinical sexologist Alessandra Rampolla (pictured) one final time to reflect on what they have (and haven't) learnt.

WHO DO YOU THINK YOU ARE? US
SBS, Tuesday, 7.30pm

Some say that the less you know about an actor's personal life, the more believable they are in any given role; there's no risk of confusing the real with the fictitious. For this reason, many actors understandably prefer to keep their personal lives separate from their professional ones. Breaking Bad star Bryan Cranston (pictured) is one such actor who seems to manage to dodge the paparazzi and any unwanted attention. But, we all have our weaknesses and Cranston is presumably the allure of genealogy and discovering nuggets from his family's past. Get to know the star's family story as he unearths an ancestor's heroic dedication during the Civil War.

WELLMANIA

If the notion of daily cold-pressed green juices and spin classes make you feel ill, this tongue-in-cheek series may well be your (highly caffeinated) cup of tea. If you're already a yogi devotee, brace yourself for hilarious situations that will really shake your chakra.

Aussie comedian Celeste Barber has made a name for herself lampooning the over-the-top outfits and ridiculous poses of genetically blessed celebs on social media – now she's set for stardom with this fresh, funny new series.

Based on the bestselling book by journalist Brigid Delaney, Barber plays Liv, an Aussie, New York-based 30-something food writer. After she lands a dream gig as judge on an US cooking show, Liv's plans are in pieces when, after a quick visit to Sydney, immigration won't grant her a green card thanks to her "horrible cholesterol levels and insane blood pressure". In short: before she can return to New York, Liv needs to get healthy – and quick.

Created by Delaney and Benjamin Law (The Family Law), Wellmania pokes fun at our wellness culture and obsession with physical perfection as Liv tries anything and everything – including a colonoscopy and microdosing LSD – to whip herself back into shape.

Barber, who describes Liv as "so exciting and dynamic and full-on and wrong", steals the show. Also starring JJ Fong (Go Girls), Remy Hii (Neighbours) and Miranda Otto, it's a free-wheeling guilty pleasure about learning to live life to its best: just what the doctor ordered. – Rebecca Balloch

Gardening

Perfect gardening weather

Many towns across Central Queensland are looking to bloom great after the last few wet months.

And it would be more than twenty years since this region has experienced such a perfectly wet start to the year.

Now that the temperature has dropped by several degrees, we finally have the optimum gardening weather.

So this weekend take a break from your other chores and make time to get into the garden!

At the moment it is timely to remind all gardeners that it is time to fertilise their lawns.

I believe generally that a little seasonal fertilising is better is far better than a big dose on the odd occasion.

Select a fertiliser with the analysis of nitrogen, phosphorous and potassium at a ratio of 3:1:2.

But always beware of high-nitrogen fertilisers ie. Higher than 20 parts nitrogen, as they promote growth spurts unless the nitrogen is in a slow-release form.

Nitrogen promotes seven parts leaf growth to one part root growth, which just means more mowing!

Your lawn may need extra nitrogen during the main growing season to maintain good colour and growth.

It is sometimes a matter of trial and error to get the right amount.

Slow-release fertilisers may be easier for most people but are more expensive.

I am a big fan of organic fertilisers, but you may need to apply them a little heavier to get the required nutrients.

Organic fertilisers have the extra benefit of adding organic matter to the soil, which in the long term helps to hold the fertiliser in the soil longer.

Remember all fertilisers should be watered into the lawn.

The preparation of garden beds, whether flowers, vegetables, or shrubs, is now recommended.

However, if you are not using fresh garden soil you may need to open and aerate the soil, as the soil tends to harden up and compact after a little rain and following hot dry weather.

Once aerated I would add some compost or some other form of vegetable matter like well-aged straw mulch like lucerne or manure.

One handy hint to remember when working with compost or straw mulches is to wet them down before spreading them around the garden as they can be dusted, it will also help to ease any allergies.

I would also recommend adding some blood and bone fertiliser and some potash to the beds at this time to encourage growth and flowers.

I remember a former champion gardener who would always go out and gather old wood ash and charcoal for his garden at this time of year, as they would condition the soil and also provide potash.

Before you start planting your garden check the Ph of the soil, pH is the scale to determine the Acidity (sourness) or Alkalinity (sweetness) of your soil.

Acid soil has a pH between 0 & 6.5 and Alkaline soil has a pH between 7.5 & 14 with the neutral point of soil being 7.

Soil test kits are available for sale in most hardware stores.

In Western Queensland, the soil is generally sweet or Alkaline soil, and the soil has a high pH.

The problem that creates is with high Ph nutrients are not available to the plants.

Adjusting the pH to an acceptable level, 6.5 is ideal, unlocks the nutrients and makes them available to your plants.

The best garden soil for most plants has a pH of 6.0 - 6.5. If the soil is Alkaline, or sweet 7:5-14, add Sulphur or Acidic Manures like chicken manure as that will help to bring the back naturally.

Allamanda williamsonii.

Rosmarinus officinalis.

Buddleia davidii White Bouquet in Blackall.

Bougainvillea Singapore Pink bracts.

Ixora Sunkist.

Hibiscus Blackall 150 Lucy.

If the soil is Acidic, sour 0-7:5, then Garden Lime can be added.

It is also time to lift, divide, propagate and replant herbaceous perennials.

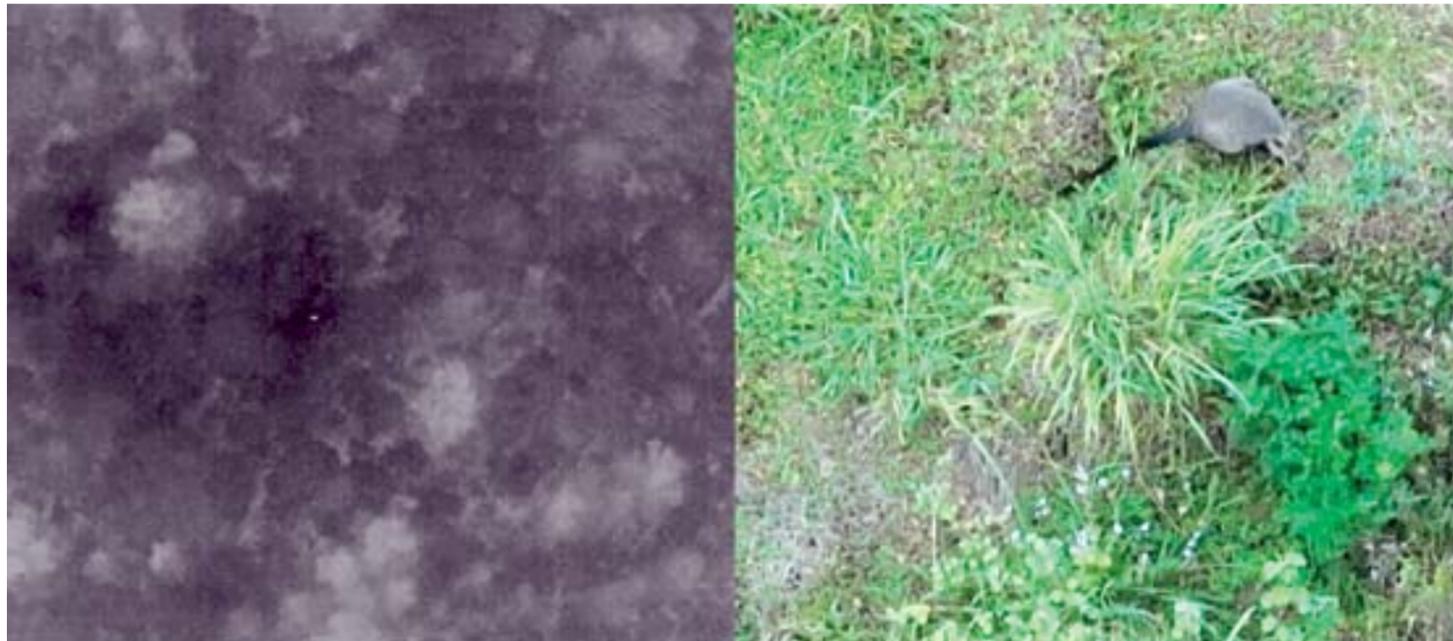

The weather is ideal for planting Sweet Peas, Strawberry runners, most flower and vegetable seedlings, bulbs and just about every variety of trees and shrubs. Hard-to-propagate plants like Lavender, Rosemary and Native Plants have the best chance of being propagated now.

Many flowering shrubs, such as Allamanda, Bougainvillea, Buddleia, Hibiscus and Ixoras are looking great now and all of these can be planted now as well. Remember when planting your new plants give them, regular watering as well as a good measure of water-soluble fertiliser to encourage new root production so your plant will thrive.

Thermal shots showing evidence of feral pigs.

Thermal drone tech is tackling feral pigs

By Adam Quinn, Greyman Ops

Numerous significant rain events over the past three years are resulting in a surge in populations of feral pigs that are wreaking havoc over large swathes of grazing and growing country across Queensland.

Landowners and managers are struggling to keep up with the numbers, even with the help of recreational hunters and shooters.

With up to 12 piglets per sow, and breeding every six months in some cases, the problem is exploding.

While ground trapping, baiting and shooting are often the most cost-effective, the number of pigs destroyed is usually not greater than 15-20 at a time – often less than 10, depending on the skills and experience of the hunters.

Over large areas, aerial pig destruction programs are the most effective at controlling feral pig populations, however, the cost of helicopters and shooters can be high, however, the cost per pig is usually <$40, depending on the total numbers taken.

One technology that is proving particularly effective in these programs is commercial-grade thermal drones.

Thermal drones are unmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs) equipped with highly sensitive thermal imaging cameras that can detect heat signatures from animals on the ground from 500 meters away.

At Greyman Ops, we are using high-resolution thermal drones, operated by licensed and experienced UAV pilots are proving to be a valuable tool in the fight against wild pigs, and here's why:

Firstly, thermal drones can cover large areas of land quickly and efficiently.

With their high speed and agility, and flight times of up to 45 minutes, thermal drones can easily navigate rough terrain and densely wooded areas, making them an ideal tool for monitoring and detecting feral pig populations in large and remote areas.

By flying over large areas of land, thermal drones can identify pig hotspots and help contractors to prioritize their control efforts, saving time and resources.

Secondly, thermal drones can detect pigs that are hiding under foliage, in rivers and creeks or in dense vegetation from above.

This is particularly advantageous in areas where wild pigs are known to be present but are difficult to locate.

The thermal cameras on these drones can detect the heat signatures of pigs, even in areas with heavy tree cover, making it easier to locate and control these animals.

Thirdly, thermal drones are non-invasive and non-destructive.

This means that they can be used without causing harm to the environment or other animals.

Unlike traditional methods of pig control, such as hunting or trapping, thermal drones do not disturb the natural habitat of other animals or cause damage to the ecosystem.

Finally, thermal drones are cost-effective.

While the initial cost of purchasing and setting up a thermal drone program is high, the reduced costs of delivering aerial surveillance and targeting, with the drone to find pigs, before sending a helicopter to dispatch, is significant.

By using thermal drones to locate and monitor pig populations, farmers and landowners can focus their control efforts more effectively, reducing the need for costly and time-consuming methods such as trapping or hunting.

We (Greyman Ops) have been receiving strong interest in our drone services, especially as they enable significantly lower-cost programs than chopper-based programs.

Thermal drones are proving to be a valuable tool in the fight against wild pigs. They offer a fast, efficient, non-invasive and cost-effective way of locating and monitoring pig populations, allowing us prioritize control efforts and reduce the damage caused by these animals.

Please get in touch with Greyman Ops if you have any questions about how new tech can be used to manage biosecurity risks and feral animal problems in your region.

Meat wins

By Meat & Livestock Australia

The ever-improving sustainability of the Australian red meat industry has been recognised with red meat supplier Paradigm Foods and its Roots Regenerative brand, victorious in their category at the Banksia Awards this week.

The Banksia Awards is Australia's longest-running and most prestigious sustainability awards and attracted a record number of entries for 2023.

MLA is a proud sponsor.

Meat & Livestock Australia (MLA) managing director, Jason Strong, congratulated Paradigm Foods on winning in its category along with the three other red meat industry finalists from the awards—HW Greenham, Leather Cattle Co, and Future Feed.

"Paradigm Foods is at the forefront of sharing the amazing sustainability story of the Australian red meat industry," Mr Strong said.

"They are connecting consumers around the world with a deeper understanding of the food on their plates, telling the story of the industry's land, animals and people.

"Through Roots Regenerative, they are deeply committed to regenerative agriculture, reducing food waste, improving animal welfare and overall sustainability.

"Winning this award is an amazing recognition of the hard work and dedication of the Paradigm Foods team and their partners." Mr Strong said that many others in the industry are keen to build on their own sustainability story.

"For MLA and the Australian red meat and livestock industry, sustainability means the production of livestock in a way that is environmentally, socially and financially responsible with respect to our people, our animals and our natural resources," Mr Strong said.

"MLA's research and development investments are focused on demonstrating that sustainability goes hand in hand with productivity and long-term inter-generational success."

He said the whole industry had a strong sustainability story to tell, including its ambitious plans to be carbon neutral by 2030 (CN30).

To date, the red meat sector has more than halved its emissions from 2005 baseline levels.

"The Australian Beef and Sheep Sustainability Frameworks drives the red meat and livestock industry's commitment.

"The Frameworks are industry-led but customer and investor-focused, demonstrating industries' commitment to sustainability and to transparently reporting industry sustainability performance and progress."

Wool market report shows downward slide has halted

By Australian Wool Network

The Australian wool market has managed to halt its downward slide, albeit by the smallest of margins.

The sale reduced in size compared to previous weeks, after 9.4 per cent of the offering was withdrawn prior to the sale, there were 40,224 bales on offer nationally, 3,825 fewer bales than the previous series.

The main driver in the market recording an overall increase was strong demand in the medium to broad merino fleece types.

Market results were quite varied between the three selling centres.

The Fremantle region was the strongest performer for the series, recording increases across all sectors.

The individual Micron Price Guides (MPGs) in the West for merino fleece climbed by between 10 and 25 cents.

Gains in the skirtings and oddments helped push the Western Indicator up by 17 cents for the week.

In Sydney, losses were recorded across all merino fleece MPGs finer than 19.5 micron, these Northern MPGs dropped by between 6 and 25 cents.

This combined with falls in the oddment and skirting sectors pushed the Northern Indicator down by 7 cents.

The Melbourne market was extremely varied depending on the micron.

The MPGs for 18.5 micron and finer fell by between 9 and 103 cents (17 micron most affected), while the MPGs for 19.0 to 21.0 micron climbed by between 15 and 55 cents.

The Southern indicator added 9 cents for the week.

The AWEX Eastern Market Indicator (EMI) managed a one-cent rise, closing at 1,318 cents.

The Australian dollar (AUD) added over a full cent (1.03) compared to the US dollar (USD) since the close of the previous series.

This meant when viewed in USD buyers' purchases were comparatively dearer, thus preventing the market from recording a larger increase.

This is highlighted when viewing the EMI in USD terms, the EMI gained 14 US cents for the week, an increase of 1.6 per cent (compared to the 0.08 per cent increase in AUD terms).

Swim champs honoured

By Suzie C McDarra

The Longreach Swimming Club Monday night comps culminated in a presentation night on Monday with the traditional barbecue and games.

President Clare Walker who's been part of the committee for eight years said the club had grown from a group of 25 children over the years.

While the bulk of participants are locally based kids, there's been out-of-towners coming into club when possible as well, plus many members of the club have participated in carnivals around the district at Winton, Blackall, Barcardine as well as the recent Longreach carnival.

About 100 kids turned out for the Longreach Memorial carnival in February, with swimmers coming from Springsure, Rockhampton, and Yeppoon.

One swimmer to watch this year is Winton Club member Harriet Holcombe whose dedication to succeed is evident by coming over to Longreach to compete in club nights.

Harriet is practicing for the upcoming state swimming championships.

Swimming age champions took home personally named camping chairs Jonah L (12 yrs), Sidney M (13 yrs), Maggie G (12 yrs), Max B (14 yrs) and Abby W (11 yrs), Tom S (10 yrs), Taya M (10 yrs), Xander F (11 yrs) and Abby M (8 yrs), Mac S (8 yrs), Brian H (9 yrs) and Anna B (9 yrs). Missing Matilda B (13 yrs), Felicity L (15 yrs).

Swimming Club Champions Abby M and Mac S scored a trophy, an engraved water bottle and a shield.

Breaking pool records this season was Xander F (left) who set a new record in Boys 11 yrs 200 metre Freestyle with a time of 3:32:52.

Abby W set a record in Breaststroke Girls 11 yrs with a time of 1:30:30 which is four seconds on the 2022 record.

Max B smashed the 2022 record in the Boys 14 yrs 100 Freestyle with 1:07:78 (the previous record was 1:20:20).

They were awarded Easter treats.

Most Improved were Cooper M (Senior Boy Club champions, Abby M and Mac S.

11-16 yrs), Pippa W (Junior Girl 4-10 yrs), Sam B (Junior Boy 4-10 yrs) and Harlow O (Senior Girl 11-16 yrs). They received Funkita towels.

Cooper also received the President's Award for his consistent good attitude and sportsmanship, receiving a trophy and goggles.

There were 10 different Swim Star awards Ben S and Max B, Charlii B, Atticus H, Emily W and Maeve W, Isla C, Xander M, Henry B and Tom S.

Recognition went to Ben for his readiness to always lend a hand, Max for being a great role model, Charlii for her enthusiasm for PBs and moving up to 50m events this season, Atticus for representing the Stingrays with pride at carnivals, Emily and Maeve for being the loudest in the cheerers in the squad, Isla for always having a smile on her face, Xander for eating the most burgers on club nights and Tom for being the best self-marshaller.

Longreach strong over Ilfracombe Tigers

By Michael R Williams

The Longreach/ Ilfracombe Tigers have managed to inch out long-time rivals Blackall in a 26 - 12 thriller in Ilfracombe.

Longreach assistant coach Gavin Grove said he and coach Kien Dickson were happy with how the Tigers aimed up to the challenge.

"We had spoken pretty directly about what we had to do to beat a strong Blackall side and the team went and completed those things," he said.

"There were not many players who didn't play well.

"But our forward pack and our reserves deserve a big mention, they were outstanding."

Going forward, the coaches said the side had much to improve on throughout the season.

"Kien and I have always believed this side will get better later in the season as we have so many new players in crucial positions and a new style of play, so we are pretty confident the best is ahead of us yet," he said.

"Happy with the start to the year, we have some big away games coming up in the back half of the season, so plenty of improvement still to be made, but we believe we have the improvement in us still, especially as we get fitter and our spine play more games together.

Mr Groves commended the opposition.

"Blackall is a good side with some new faces, they kept coming as we knew they would," he said.

"And we look forward to another good game when we play them in Blackall later in the season."

Corfield junior tennis

By Michael Lloyd

Last Sunday saw tennis coach Michael Lloyd head up to Corfield to deliver a session for 18 local kids aged three-13 on a hot, but great afternoon.

Skill levels were good and enthusiasm high with some of the children not seeing anyone but their family for the last month.

The Corfield Sports Club has done a great job securing such a fantastic facility in such a remote location and, thanks to local organisers, it will hopefully be utilised more in the future.

A big thanks to Liz and Bruce Godfrey for helping organise the day, to all the parents who came out on the court, and to the cooks who fired up the barbecue at the end.

Those driving past this small outpost in relatively the middle of nowhere might have been surprised at the rollout (boosted by a local race meeting at the same time) but it was great to see the community come together.

Many questions were asked about the next visit and coach Lloyd is keen to come back.

Travelling all over the countryside for sport and family

Well over the last two weeks, I have literally travelled all over the countryside, as the song goes.

I headed down to Brisbane to catch up with my folks and on the way back did a few coaching stops.

Morven and Augathella are keen on some additional sporting opportunities.

Staff at the school and people in the town were keen to hear about coaching opportunities, especially for the kids.

I visited Tambo again for cricket last Thursday and had another good turnout.

Shout out to the girls in Tambo who showed some great cricketing talent.

The rooster next to the motel had me up early so it was off to Blackall for their cricket clinic.

A big thanks to Matt Maclean for helping me organise it on the ground.

Blackall, for those not in the know, has a great indoor cricket facility, and a handy venue for events such as this training session.

Unfortunately, there was already a tenant in the building went Matt arrived to open up before I got there.

Luckily he was able to encourage said user to head off into the nearby long grass while we trained, just another day out west.

We had a fantastic rollup for the session, with many a cricket talent being shown off.

Again some talented young ladies emerged from the group and I'm looking forward to seeing the continued development of both Tambo and Blackall cricket squads into next summer.

The following Saturday morning I did some tennis coaching in Blackall.

While tennis has disappeared temporarily in town, there are plenty of people looking forward to its re-emergence, with stories of glory days not too far away. Thanks to the Blackall-Tambo Council for their support and to Matt and wife Steph for their help on the court as well, might need thicker thongs next week Matt.

With a quick turnaround at home in Longreach, I was off to Corfield to coach tennis.

For those of you who don't know Corfield, it is about 85km North East of Winton, with a couple of houses, a pub, a race track and two brand-new tennis courts. Well, 18 kids turned up, aged three-13, and with some help from mums and dads, I think they all had a great time.

Thanks to all those who helped organise the day to keep the sport alive in the region.

So hopefully I'm highlighting that there are opportunities for your kids out there, and with your help, there will be plenty more to come.

Smooth return to racing

By Andrew Watts, Longreach Jockey Club

Racing returned to Longreach on Saturday afternoon with the beach-themed races a big success with locals and some great racing on the track.

Smooth Move stole the show for David Riewoldt having a great start to the 2023 season, the horse now winning two of its three starts and looking to have a promising year ahead.

Smooth Move took out the O'Brien's Open Plate over 1200m, beating Zukas and American Genius in a busy finish. After bungling the start, Smooth Move was taken into a prominent position by jockey Robbie Farr and unleashed with a powerful run to beat Zukas by a nose and American Genius a length and a half away in third.

Training honours on the day went to Boy Foster from Ilfracombe winning two races.

First Prize Artist won the first by three-quarters of a length over Use Early and Lunar Glide in the Commercial Hotel Longreach Class B Handicap and the second and the second leg of the double was an impressive win to Bitter Sweet Pluck.

Bitter Sweet Pluck tracked the speed set by Mufassa in the early position and presented with a hundred metres to go to win by a short half-head and Wicky for David Riewoldt and Matty Gray finished in third position.

Ride of the day went to Anna Bakos with her win on Park Burn, trained by Mark Oats and owned by the Caroline family of Blackall.

The horse took out the cudros money with around $13000 for the win. Park Burn tracked a nice speed set up by Lasell and Mr Cruise and was in a tricky position turning for home. Bakos went back to the fence and got a gap coming back to win by three-quarters of a length from Royo who was a good run in second and Lasell, the early leader held on for third.

Smooth Move taking out race 5.

It was an emotional, exciting and memorable day for Ray Herman and John Rudd winning the Maiden with Our Young Man.

Our Young Man has been racing for many seasons now and has been unable to crack that elusive win but lining up for his 42nd start on Saturday, he saluted for the very first time coming with a withering burst to defeat I'm Free and Tamsin.

It's persistence with a capital P for Herman who has had this horse throughout his career which started back in July 2021.

TAB racing heads to Longreach this Monday with Michael Charge from Sky Racing being in attendance, entry is free with seven great local races to be covered by TAB and Sky Channel. Look forward to seeing everyone there.

Don't forget the Easter Races at Barcardine next Saturday and the Easter Monday races at Augathella.
